GOVERNOR RITCHIE of Maryland withdraws in favor of Governor Smith and harmony. But Senator Reed of Missouri will stick as a candidate and says he "can bar Smith."

Practical politicians think that he cannot. They predict at Houston a repetition of the Kansas City program, the presidential candidate, Governor Smith, nominated on the first ballot, and a vice-presidential candidate, pleasing to farmers, nominated with one ballot immediately afterward.

New low prices in the stock market yesterday. Many little lambs went home and left their fleece behind them. Those too weak to hold stocks throw them overboard. Strong men pick them up and there will be another start in the prosperity market. That is how it usually is.

California, a heavy loser in the collapse of Bancitaly stock, may find comfort in the real estate's gains. Concentrating on stock speculation, Californians have neglected California's best asset, REAL ESTATE. Many will realize that a piece of the solid earth is safer property than a piece of nicely printed paper.

W. F. Knudsen, Chevrolet president, offers cheerful news on General Motors. In May his company turned out 140,700 Chevrolet cars. On one day, May 26, the product was 7075 finished cars and trucks. May, 1928, is 25,000 cars ahead of May, 1927.

That's good production, but high General Motors officials should bear in mind that the machinery in their brains is more valuable than any other asset of General Motors. Men like President Sloan of General Motors and Raskob, head of General Motors finance, work themselves as they wouldn't work any piece of machinery.

They take the night train from New York to Detroit, begin work there at 8 in the morning, work through the whole day, eating sandwiches at noon, still working and take the night train back to New York.

No machine can stand that, and no duty to stockholders justifies it.

Dr. Walsh of Fordham University tells young men: "The world is confronted with more mysteries than ever before. Science solves only a few problems."

Yes, indeed. Why does the hydrogen atom have a single proton in the center, and a single electron revolving around it? Why does the helium atom, first discovered on the sun through the spectroscope, have four nuclei with two electrons revolving around them, and how does the formation of four grammes helium, from hydrogen, produce energy as great as though 80 tons of coal were burned?—Here are some mysteries for you.

Everything is a mystery if you go far enough into it. And the greatest of all mysteries is thought, which has no proton or electron, so far as we know, and is driven by an energy that has no more practical name than "Soul" or "Mind."

AMUNDSEN CALLS HELP AS PLANE DROPS INTO SEA IN NOBILE SEARCH

London, June 20 (INS)—The French seaplane of Rene Guilbaud and Capt. Roald Amundsen, with Lieut. Lief Dietrichsen also aboard, which hopped off at Tromsoe, Norway, on Monday to search for the Nobile expedition, has been forced down in the Polar sea and his wirelessed an urgent appeal for aid, according to a Central News dispatch from Berlin this afternoon.

No other news had been received of the Guilbaud-Amundsen-Dietrichsen plane since its hop off, although it was reported to have been sighted over Green Harbor en route for King's Bay, Spitzbergen.

POLICE RESCUE 'LADY LINDY' WHEN CHEERING THRONG RUSHES AUTO

London, June 20.—Hundreds of cheering men and women mobbed Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston aviatrix and first woman to fly the Atlantic, today when she emerged from the Hyde Park Hotel on her way to pay a social call.

The milling crowd overflowed the streets around the hotel and temporarily got beyond control of the police. The throng, with scores of women in the lead, rushed Miss Earhart's car, waiting at the side entrance. Many of the women climbed aboard the auto and attempted to embrace America's "Lady Lindy." It was only with the greatest difficulty that the crowd was driven back by the policemen.

Amid thundering cheers Miss Earhart then started through the densely packed streets toward the home of Mrs. Frederick

MEDFORD PLANS BIG TIME FOR MISS 'LINDY'

While cablegrams of felicitation were singing beneath the sea to Amelia Earhart today and were being answered by the "Lindy Girl," plans were being laid in Medford for her home city reception—the greatest ever accorded to a person in Medford's history.

According to George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher and New York representative of Miss Earhart and her co-fliers, "Bill" Stultz and Lou Gordon, the transatlantic trio will arrive back in Gotham on July 4.

They will leave Europe June 27 and on arrival in New York, Amelia will continue direct to Boston.

STOCKS RALLY, THEN MOVE UNEVENLY

Stocks rallied smartly in Wall St. in the opening period today, then moved unevenly. General Motors rose 3 3-4 to 175 3-4, recovering the bulk of yesterday's loss. Cast Iron Pipe added $15 at $245. Wright dropped over $8 from its day's high.

500 STRIKERS BATTLE POLICE; NINE ARRESTED

New Bedford, June 20—Three girls and six men were arrested today and two policemen and several mill operatives were injured during a riot at the Wamsutta mill gate, where police clashed with 500 strikers.

Trouble began when workers of the radical group attempted to interfere with some workers going to the mills. Police intervened and were attacked with umbrellas.

Patrolman John P. Walsh was knocked unconscious by a blow from an umbrella and Patrolman William J. Hickey was felled with brass knuckles.

All of those arrested are charged with disorderly conduct, but other charges may be made.

The girls gave their names as Marie C. Silva, 19; Maria Simares, 23, and Bessie Hatzikares, 23.

POWER TRUST WORKING GREAT 'SOCIAL LOBBY'

Washington, June 20 (INS)—An all-embracing "social lobby" of girls and women, created by the so-called power trust and working ceaselessly to instill "correct ideas" into neighbors, clubwomen and children, was disclosed yesterday.

Subpoenaed records in the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the public utilities picture these women as fighting municipal or state ownership projects and electioneering, "contacting" meanwhile with hundreds of thousands of persons in every walk of life.

HOW OTHER AMERICAN GIRLS MET ROYALTY

WOMEN MOB EARHART GIRL IN EFFORTS TO KISS HER

Guest, of Pittsburgh, her backer, for luncheon. The luncheon was the first event scheduled on her program for the day.

Just like Col. Lindbergh, whom she so closely resembles, Miss Earhart today faced a wildly acclaiming world in borrowed clothes. It was possible that she would still be wearing these borrowed clothes when she was presented to the king and queen. This morning arrangements were being made for the presentation later in the day.

When the girl flier made her first appearance today she was wearing a borrowed loose-fitting dress. Garbed in this she held a little reception in the sitting room of her Hyde Park hotel suite, which was rapidly becoming a bower of flowers sent by friends and admirers.

"Everything I've got to wear at present is borrowed, but then I'm not vain," she said, and her hearers agreed that she wasn't.

Talking to newspaper men, Miss Earhart declared that during her brief stay in England she did not want to be the subject of "hero worship."

"I have done nothing to merit it," she said.

Capt. H. H. Railey, who made the London arrangements for the flight, remarked that Miss Earhart was distressed that she was occupying the limelight to the exclusion of Pilot Stultz, to whom the real credit for the success of the flight is due.

"That's just the point," Miss Earhart interrupted. "It is because I am a woman that I have been forced into the spotlight. The credit for the success of the flight is due to Stultz. He controlled the plane practically throughout and was just splendid."

Hundreds of congratulatory messages have been received by the girl from America and Europe. She laughingly admitted that two of the messages were marriage proposals. Miss Earhart is already engaged.

Cheered by Crowds

Despite her fatigue of last night, Miss Earhart was a comparatively early riser. She was up at 9:30 and shortly afterward had breakfast in her room.

The first caller to be admitted was Ray Atherton, charge d'affaires of the American embassy, who presented formal congratulations.

One of Miss Earhart's first acts on beginning her outside social activities was to leave cards at the American ambassador's residence for Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, who is in the United States at present.

After lunching with Mrs. Guest, the American girl intended to spend the afternoon shopping. She planned to go to the Embassy Club tonight for a dance after dining with the Guest family.

Long before she awoke today a crowd of several thousands gathered outside the windows of her hotel suite and called on her for a speech. Extra police were on hand to keep the crowd in check.

Miss Earhart, in her interview with reporters before leaving the hotel, said:

"I intend to do some flying here. I am keenly interested in every aspect of aviation and I want to study European methods to see how they compare with American. I am especially interested in the small type of plane known as the moth.

"It is possible that I may make a flying tour of the United States when I return home, but that is indefinite.

Pleased at Welcome

"I am charmed over everything I have seen here and the wonderful hospitality shown me. I am sincerely grateful.

"I hope to visit some of the big flying fields in England and investigate the various types of planes in use over here.

"I am a strong believer in the future of transatlantic flying. Coming over we had safety and speed, but no comfort. That will be remedied in the future."

Miss Earhart said that interest in aviation among women is increasing everywhere.

With Miss Earhart, Pilot Stultz and Mechanician Gordon attended the luncheon at Mrs. Guest's.

Right after breakfast Stultz and Gordon started out to get what thrills they could from the London sights. The youthful mechanician of the plane is likely to get a lot of them.

Yesterday, coming to London by road from Southampton, he saw the first high silk hat of his life. The automobile in which Stultz and he were riding was caught in a stream of incoming returning from the Ascot races.

Slim then saw not only his first topper, but something he didn't know existed—a high gray hat, which headgear is in fashion at Ascot.

"What is this?" he exclaimed, "a parade?"

Gordon Gets a Laugh

Miss Earhart on the same trip to London was interested in a group of English schoolboys dressed in Eton costume of dignified black coat, long trousers, broad starched collar and high silk hat.

Gordon, a cheery, whole-hearted youth, who takes the Atlantic flight most casually, got a great laugh over the fact that the Friendship's little store of provisions included some pemmican, which is the mainstay of Arctic explorers.

When the plane encountered a snowstorm Gordon suggested it was time to get out the pemmican.

It was Gordon who brought joy to the Friendship's crew by sighting land on the last stage of the flight from Burry Port to Southampton. He took things easy, singing in the cabin, smoking cigarettes and commenting on the English scenery all the way. There had been no smokes on the Atlantic flight, and he was making up for lost time.

Miss Earhart said if she had time she wanted to visit Croydon airdrome late in the day. It is there that the great commercial lines radiating out of England to the continent converge.

Youth Burned

Louis Giordano, 17, was slightly burned on the forehead when naphtha used in cleaning hats at a shoe shining place at 160A Hanover st. caught fire. Firemen put out the blaze after confining the damage to $25, and treated Giordano's burns.

Girl Flier Longed to 'Snuff Out the Moon'

"I'd like to—oh, tumble a few stars about tonight, send some suns crashing into the vast abyss of pure space; snuff out the moon—and then find one word to describe the whole debacle."

Amelia Earhart's adventurous spirit was put into words in a recent letter to a friend, the friend declared today in giving out the exclusive story of his observations of the girl transatlantic flier on condition that he remain anonymous.

"I feel that I am acting the part of a better friend," said the man, "by trying to portray her as she really is rather than permit misinformation to leave conditions regarding her which are false and which would grieve Miss Earhart more than any amount of publicity.

"I was just lucky enough to know her. There was never a doubt in my mind or in the minds of other friends that she would make this flight and complete it successfully.

"How could a girl so marvelously equipped in every way for such adventure fail? Newspaper reports have told us how coolly she acted her part on the perilous crossing of the North Atlantic.

SPEEDS AT 83 MILES HOUR

"But that was to be expected. I have driven with Miss Earhart in her roadster at the rate of 81 miles an hour with no more worry about my safety than if I were riding a kiddie kar.

"The American public may be envied the pleasure of meeting Miss Earhart for the first time. It is an experience that few forget. The reasons for it are multitudinous.

"Clean cut, with coquettish foibles, straightforward, honest to the core, interested in everything, fastidious and abstemious herself yet broad enough to overlook the opposite in others, with a man's brain and a woman's touch, visionary yet practical, and with varied tastes which stamp her as an unusual, cultured person.

"Her independent trend of mind and poetic leanings are shown in the following excerpts from letters to one of her friends:

"'Nature, dumb Dame, does not appreciate esthetics nor yearnings of the spirit, nor anything that makes the human animal forget for a space his encumbering body. She demands, inexorably, pay for the privilege of seeing the Bowery at four P. M., pay for the sight of stars through blossoming trees (when we should be sleeping dully) and pay for the habit of drifting. Selah. She gets it.'

FEELS CALL OF SPRING

And another:

"'The spring wildness is descending on me. The usual longing for fried eggs, bacon, bread, etc., at tasting of smoke and compounded with leaves and dirt, is stirring within me. I plan to live in a tent this summer. I do not know how, when or where. The idea just shapes itself.'

"And still another:

"'Do you think because I do not obviously smoke, the rain doesn't hurt me or sunsets or the stars through blossoming trees? Don't you see the pin points of sensations are like great dagger holes. If I expressed what shakes me or affects me I should go up in one grand explosion—bang!'"

Girl Gives Stultz All Credit for Sea Flight

Washington, June 20 (AP)—The successful flight of the airplane Friendship was entirely due to Wilmer Stultz' "great skill," Miss Amelia Earhart cabled Secretary of State Kellogg today. The cable, in reply to congratulations on the flight of the Friendship, read:

"The crew of the Friendship joins me in hearty appreciation of your message. It is my earnest wish that the people of the United States understand that the success was entirely due to the great skill of Mr. Stultz."

Miss Earhart Gets Marriage Offer Among Messages

London, June 20 (AP)—When Miss Amelia Earhart denied yesterday that she had received any proposals of marriage following her feat of being the first woman to fly across the Atlantic, she was speaking the truth, but she would not be able to say the same thing today.

In this morning's mail the first proposal arrived. It was from some suitor in Europe, but when queries were sent to the flier as to who the aspirant might be she declined to reveal his name.

BIG RECEPTION FOR LINDY GIRL

Medfordites, headed by Mayor Edward H. Larkin, was appointed to map plans for the huge welcome to Amelia.

Others on the committee include President Michael E. O'Brien of the board of aldermen and Aldermen Frank I. Fuller, Jr., of Ward 5, the Earhart family ward, and James J. Nicholson.

Before Miss Earhart scored into undying fame by accomplishing the feat of being the first woman to fly the Atlantic, the city of Medford had appropriated $1000 for the annual Fourth of July celebration.

If Amelia is able to reach Medford by July 4, however, this appropriation will be materially increased and Amelia probably will constitute teh major part of Medford's Independence Day excitement.

The Medford Chamber of Commerce is co-operating with the city officials in arranging the flying second worker's welcome.

KEEP CABLES HUMMING.

Amelia received one cablegram from Boston today and sent two back, one of them to Governor Fuller in answer to a cablegram of congratulation dispatched yesterday; the other addressed to "The Gang at the Boston Airport" in answer to their message.

Her cablegram to the Governor read:

"Your Excellency's kind message is much appreciated by us all."

The cable sent by the "Airport Gang" to Amelia said:

"Congratulations for your fine success. We were with you every minute, heart and soul."

She answered:

"You did your part and we are all grateful."

Earhart Girl Back on July 4; Will Speed to Hub

New York, June 20 (INS)—Miss Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, crew of the transatlantic p'ane Friendship, will leave Europe a week from today and will arrive here on July 4, according to an announcement by George Palmer Putnam, their New York representative.

From New York the fliers will go to Boston, he indicated.

Miss Earhart Lost Shirt in Card Game

New York, June 20 (AP)—Fashions—either of air or earth—have no appeal to Amelia Earhart. Clothes she regards as a matter-of-fact necessity, like food.

Furthermore flying is a perfectly natural thing in her opinion and requires no special togs; a dress is as good air equipment as trousers.

So when the Boston social worker prepared to hop across the Atlantic she even had to borrow her flying clothes.

Brown trousers, a silk shirt, a turtle-necked sweater, and an old leather flying coat, plus two handkerchiefs and a toothbrush. These were Amelia Earhart's accouterments when she stepped over to Wales. Even the trousers went only on the insistance of friends.

SHE PLAYS "RUMMY"

"I don't get all cluttered up for an automobile ride," she protested. "Why should I dress any differently for this?"

When, in the long days of waiting at Trepassey, she wired a friend who knew of her scant wardrobe that she was seeing much of the Catholic sisters and received the suggestion that she retire and be murdered by the nuns, she sent the characteristic reply:

"Thanks for father advice. No need for laundering. Stockings and underwear worn out and have lost only shirt to Slim playing rummy."

A bag she vetoed as "useless equipment," refusing to take anything "the boys" could not have. Money was eliminated on the same grounds.

"If I don't get there," she announced, "I won't need it. And if I do it will be all right."

Money, those who know her say, has never been part of her scheme of things for herself. It is of use only for what it will buy in the work in which her interest lies.

RAN STONE QUARRY

That interest, now centered in aviation and the Denison Settlement House of Boston, has led her through a vari-colored field. A pre-medic, scientific corpse at Columbia University, Canadian Red Cross nursing service during the war, work in commercial photography have been a few patterns in that field. She even ran a stone quarry for several months when she needed money to buy a new plane.

Amelia Earhart is a tall, athletic girl, weighing only 138 pounds in spite of her five feet nine inches. She has short blonde curly hair and level direct gray eyes. She dressed in any clothes that come to hand, save ensemble effects and sun osmelics.

She would rather read than eat, rather sit on the floor than on a chair, rather fence than play bridge, rather drive her car than do any of these.

The battered roadster known as the "Yellow Peril" is her constant companion. When annoyances irritate and troubles afflict, Amelia Earhart takes the car and hies herself to the country.

WEARS RAGGED GLOVES

She shoots through traffic with a brisk, breezy assurance, guiding wheel and gears only by the tips of fingers protruding through the ends of ragged gloves.

The recent tentative suggestion of a friend anent the purchase of new driving gloves brought round rebukes from Miss Earhart.

"Don't be absurd!" was her verdict. "It took me years to break these gloves in and I wouldn't have any others. I love to feel my fingers on the wheel."

Poise, those who know her say, is the dominating quality of her person. Through the days of waiting at Trepassey she is said never to have betrayed impatience or irritation.

When asked if she did not wish to give up the flight she replied:

"Never! I thought this all out in the first five minutes and I know I want to go. I'm going because I love life and all it has to offer. I want every opportunity and adventure it can give, and I could never welch on one of them."

Lindy Girl Thanks Fuller For His 'Kind Message'

A cablegram from Amelia Earhart, Boston's "Lindy Girl," was received by Governor Fuller today in answer to one of congratulations he sent to her and her two male companions on the transatlantic flight.

Miss Earhart's cable said:

"Your Excellency's kind message is much appreciated by us all."

Hub Airport "Gang" Sends Congratulations to Fliers

"The Gang" at the Boston Airport sent a cablegram of congratulation to Amelia Earhart and her co-fliers at London, and today received an answering cablegram from the plucky aviatrix.

"Congratulations for your fine success," cabled "The Gang." "We were with you every minute heart and soul."

Miss Earhart's answering cablegram, addressed "The Gang at the Boston Airport," read:

"You did your part and we are all grateful."

MISS EARHART 'FELT ALONE IN WORLD' ON HOP

Southampton, June 20 — Miss Amelia Earhart is "prepared to do it again" she told Universal Service before her departure for London with her two companions on the transatlantic flight.

She was greatly pleased with the reception here. "What a wonderful reception we have had!" she said. "It has been a great ordeal but I am quite happy now and am prepared to do it again."

Of her flight she said:

"There was not what I should call any physical thrill in the flight, but it was a mental exhilaration that was overpowering. As the hours went by the feeling gradually came on me that we were going to cover that illimitable stretch of waters that tumbled beneath us. What made it more impressive was that we could not see the ocean.

"It was as if we were the only people in the world an hour after four we pushed forward through the thick clouds and fog.

"There was nothing but blackness all around except for the little electric light illuminating the instruments shining through the darkness like a star. The thought came to me: "I wonder if any of the great liners have seen this faint light."

"Without boasting I can say that at no time during the journey did I seem to be the slightest degree afraid. I felt cold and uncomfortable at times and would climb into the cockpit to get a little warmth. Then I would get back into the fuselage and sit on the floor trying to write my diary. Even that was difficult to do for words seemed poor things to express what was surging through my brain.

"I could not attempt to read a novel for I was too interested on what was going on. The most exciting moment of the flight was when we first saw land, and other thrilling moments were when we sighted the America, the first ship we had seen come out of the fog, and when Bill Stultz announced we had only one hour's supply of gas left and were not in sight of land.

"I was not dismayed when the wireless gave out for I had absolute confidence in Stultz's ability to keep on the right course, but it did make us feel lonely without means of communication with the outer world.

"I feel convinced that some of the accidents to Atlantic planes have been due to the fact that the pilots were unaccustomed to night flying and flying by instruments.

"I should like to have the privilege of flying back to New York if I could have such fine companions as Bill Stultz and Slim Gordon, and, above all, such a machine as the Friendship.

"But as it is I shall visit in London and get myself some clothes, for I was careful not to buy anything new for the flight. You never knew what might happen over the Atlantic."

BOSTON AMERICAN
BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1928

Wed on Anniversary of Their Meeting

A romance which began six years ago today was climaxed in the wedding of Miss Mary Agatha Bradshaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Bradshaw of 1754 Beacon st., Brookline, to Paul Thayer Newton of New York at a nuptial mass celebrated at St. Aidan's Church this morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The Rev. Augustine Hickey, pastor of St. Paul's Church of Cambridge, who is a cousin of the bride, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Joseph Walsh and the Rev. Vincent Hickey, before an altar banked with flowers. The color scheme for the wedding was orchid and yellow, carried out in the gowns of the bride's attendants and in the home and church decorations.

Miss Bradshaw was gowned in white peau de Landry silk and Chantilly lace with a long train and shower veil and carried a bouquet of shower lilies of the valley and orchids. Her maid of honor, Miss Bernadette Pendergast, wore orchid organdie over pink satin and carried Pernet roses. Miss Margaret Bradshaw, sister of the bride, by him.

Miss Frances Dwyer of Cambridge, Miss Frances McDonnell of Boston and Mrs. Helene Cunningham of Marblehead were the bridesmaids, charmingly frocked in yellow organdie with bouquets of butterfly roses, orchids and sweet peas.

Frank Newton of Yale, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

A reception and dance was held at the Bradshaw home immediately after the ceremony for 200 guests.

The couple left for a prolonged honeymoon in Montreal and Banff, Canada. They will be at home on Ward st., Newton, after September 15.

D'YER THINK THE SUN'LL SHINE? WELL, IT WON'T

Gloom boys rally 'round! No sun for another 36 hours.

It's again' to rain instead, and the temperature will linger in the latter fifties.

When the Weather Man pulled his head out of a moist study of the weather map and removed his rubbers today, he announced that one storm center has passed Boston and is just east of Nantucket, another is sneaking in from the West, via Minnesota, and a third-wave storm is centered over Nevada, with eyes on New England.

Practically the whole country east of the Rockies is sodden.

The official forecast for Boston and vicinity reads: Cloudy, with showers tonight and Thursday; not much change in temperature; moderate easterly winds.

Bay Staters Head Smith by Acclamation Move

New York, June 20 (INS)—Bound for Houston, via Havana, 210 Democratic delegates from New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut sailed at noon today on the liner Shawnee. They will stop a couple of days in Cuban capital, then go to Galveston, arriving Monday.

"Smith will be nominated on the first ballot," was the prediction of the Massachusetts delegation of 63 men and women, headed by Democratic Committeeman McGlue.

The Massachusetts delegates propose to start a movement for the nomination of Governor Smith by acclamation when his name is presented. Other prominent members of the Bay State group, first to arrive at the Shawnee, were District Attorney William J. Foley of Suffolk County, Thos. H. Green, president of the Boston City Council, and Mrs. Nellie Miller of Worcester, founder of many Democratic clubs in that State.

The Bay Staters were welcomed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. N. Taylor Phillips, New York delegates.

600 TAXI MEN AFFECTED BY DECISION

A decision affecting nearly all of the 600 drivers of the Independent Taxicab Association was handed down by Chief Justice Bolster in Municipal Court today.

Chief Justice Bolster ruled that the Independent Taxi Owners' Insurance Co. was entitled to premium payments based upon estimated as well as meter-recorded mileage. Under his ruling Donald Mayberry, receiver for the insurance company, will receive $669.93 from Nicholis Tartar, $209.56 from Jeremiah McCarthy, $645.32 from Samuel Kaywas and $717.38 from Carl Smith.

These were premiums based upon actual and estimated mileage travel at the rate of one and three-quarters cents a mile made by the insurance commissioner.

The four against whom judgments were entered are among nearly 50 drivers who have been sued. Actions against the others will be started unless settlement is made.

FREE WIFE FROM MAN IN PRISON

Notwithstanding the plea made from his cell in State Prison by James B. Gourlay, Jr., his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Gourlay of Adams ave., West Newton, was granted a divorce today in Middlesex probate court.

Judge Hitz granted a decree after Mrs. Gourlay had testified her husband was an inmate of State Prison, having been arrested three days after their wedding in 1926, for stealing automobiles.

Gourlay addressed a letter to Judge John C. Leggat, stating he wished to contest the suit, and asked that his wife be instructed to have him brought into court.

Mrs. M. Gertrude Dietz of Paul st., Watertown, was granted a divorce from Rudolph Dietz on charges of cruel and abusive treatment.

She told Judge Arthur E. Bean her husband had struck and abused her and she was a nervous wreck.

MOTHER AIDS HARVARD BOY IN FIGHT FOR LIFE

With his mother at his bedside, Dinsmore Wheeler of Chicago, for whom the Harvard University authorities broke a 282-year-old custom to award him his degree without final examinations, was making a valiant fight for life today at Stillman Infirmary, Cambridge.

There is hope for recovery, according to doctors, and the infirmary will be kept open beyond the end of the school year so that he will not have to be moved. Wheeler was given his degree on the basis of his excellent scholastic record. During his long illness he has had several ailments successfully, culminating in blood infection.

TRAFFIC POLICEMAN IS INJURED BY AUTO

While directing traffic at Broadway and Eliot st., Patrick McGrath of the downtown traffic division was struck and injured by an automobile driven by Edward A. Casey of Emerson st., Medford, according to the police. McGrath, who lives on Norman st., Dorchester, was taken to City Hospital where he was found to have injuries to the back and right elbow.

MOTHER QUITS 4 CHILDREN OF JAILED DAD

Haverhill, June 20—Their father in jail, unable to raise $300 bail or pay a fine on a charge of making moonshine, and their mother missing after she had turned them over to Mayor Fred D. McGregor, declaring she was unable to care for them, four children, ranging in age from five to nine years, adrift for several hours, were finally placed in the

The mayor, after the children had been left in his office by the mother, whose husband, Anthony Lagoulas of 8 Galusian place had been fined $50 by Judge Winn in the district court on a charge of manufacturing liquor and held in $300 for a hearing Saturday on a charge of keeping, called City Marshal Charles D. Jones into conference in the case.

TO GREEK SCHOOL

Believing the children would be cared for by someone connected with the institution, City Marshal Jones had them taken to the Greek school on Walnut st. Later in the day the children went to the family home, and failing to find their mother or being able to enter the house, returned to the police station.

Taking them in the police automobile, Lieut. Ovila J. Lagasse visited a number of persons whom he thought to be friends of the family, but none would give them shelter. Finally he returned to the police station with the children and awaited the arrival of Mrs. Gertrude Merrill, agent in this section for the Children's Aid Society, before they were placed in the city poor farm.

The oldest, a boy of nine, told the police a pathetic story of how they had returned to the family home in Galusian place, only to find the door locked and their mother missing. There is no clue to her whereabouts and the children fear for her safety.

Lagoulas was arrested early yesterday morning when the liquor squad, headed by Officers Thomas G. Trainor and Henry Lynch, raided a small vacant tenement in York st. and found him asleep on the floor, with moonshine liquor trickling through pipes in a 40-gallon still. They seized the still and 24 gallons of moonshine.

VISITS MAYOR

Soon after Judge Winn imposed the $50 fine upon her husband, Mrs. Lagoulas with her four children appeared suddenly in the office of Mayor McGregor at City Hall, and, with the brief declaration that if her husband had to go to jail she was unable to support them, she walked away, leaving the mayor as their temporary guardian.

Then followed the mayor's conference with the city marshal, the removal of the children to the Greek school, their return to their home and the police station, and finally their removal to the city poor farm. The children are two boys and two girls, Socos, nine; John, eight; Annie, seven, and Florence, five.

MABEL BOLL TO FLY BACK TO NEW YORK

Harbor Grace, N. F., June 20—As soon as the weather permits, Miss Mabel Boll, Capt. Oliver Le Boutillier and Capt. Arthur Argles will fly back to New York in the transatlantic monoplane Columbia, in New York, the fliers will consult Charles A. Levine, owner of the Columbia, about shoving the plane to France for a westward flight to America. They are also contemplating flying to Europe and then back.

LOWELL READY FOR 100,000

Lowell, June 20—A misty drizzle has failed to soften appreciably the landing field at the new Lowell airport and everything is in readiness for the opening exercises tomorrow.

Close to 100,000 visitors are expected for the first day of the three-day meet and exposition that will dedicate the airport, and there is every indication that the dirigible Los Angeles will be on hand unless a severe storm prevents her flight from Lakehurst, N. J.

Many of the country's crack fliers will participate in the outdoor part of the dedication. The exposition will be held in four large buildings on the field. During the meet the Boston & Maine will operate a shuttle train between Lowell and the airport every half hour or oftener.

HARVARD-YALE CREW RACE DEVOTEES TAKE TIME BY FORELOCK TO BE EARLY ON SCENE, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Yachts of Smart Set Already Anchored Near Finish Line on Pleasant Waters of the Thames at New London

ONE WAY TO SEE THE YEARLY ROWING CLASSIC BETWEEN those ancient rivals, the Crimson and the Blue, is from the trains that move down the Thames as the shells move. Another way, preferred by the Bostonian enamoured of the bounding billow, is to sail his yacht by power or canvas down to New London and anchor just above the bridge for the finish of the race. Certain graceful craft already are up and away, en route to New London. Others have made rendezvous there well in advance of the later arrivals.

THE HOUSE FLAGS OF THE HORACE BINNEYS, BOTH SENIOR and junior, already flutter in the breeze that wafts up the Thames past New London. The seagoing Queen Mab, erstwhile flagship of the Eastern Yacht Club when Nathaniel Farwell Ayer was commodore, is already at anchor at New London. So is the other Binney yacht, a smaller craft than the Queen Mab, and having for owner and skipper Horace Binney, Jr.

EVERETT MORSS, BETROTHED to Miss Anne Wentworth recently, is intrepid skipper of the Black Goose, who proposes to follow up a stay at New London for the race with a long, arduous ocean traverse to Bermuda. The ocean race to Bermuda will try all the Morss skill, not an uncertain quantity by any means, when it comes to handling a schooner under straining canvas. Bermuda is the goal of several doughty skippers and crews this June.

IT'S LIKELY THAT THE CONSTELLATION will be in her accustomed anchorage for the Harvard-Yale boat race. Herbert M. Sears and the famous yacht scarcely ever miss Boat Race Day, and the Constellation is the hospitable center of much entertaining. Young Mr. William Coolidge has his sloop Vagrant entered in the New Bedford to New London race, so his yacht will add to the forest of masts that fills a goodly portion of the Thames on Friday. So may John Alden's Malabar and Evans Dick's Youth.

THE HORACE BINNEYS have pleasant plans for the summer. Mainly have they to do with the Queen Mab and cruising in Maine waters. Immediately after the boat race and attendant festivities have become history the Binneys depart for Newport. The Rhode Island Spa, however, and their smart social circle interest them but intermittently. "Bon Accueil" in Leroy ave., their Newport villa, remains in a state of linen swathed desuetude while the Binneys live and cruise at will aboard their beautifully appointed yacht.

MEMBERS OF THE PAINTING fraternity, foreign and domestic, come to town on pleasant missions—mostly having to do with transferring to everlasting paint and canvas some local potentate's likeness. Richard B. Adam of Munich comes into the category designated foreign. This wielder of the brush and manipulator of the oil tubes has taken an apartment at the Hotel Sheraton, will be there for some time and set himself up a studio where portrait painting will go on, indefinitely.

SWATHING FRAGILE CHIFFONS and fluttering volles in serviceable waterproofs became a yesterday pastime none of the Class Day throngs enjoyed particularly. The gods who sit aloft and dispense fair weather or foul were in unkindest mood. Dignified seniors and adoring relatives hastened from celebration to celebration through downpour after downpour. Boston's upper crusts, being intimately concerned in Harvard's commencement week, can only hope for fair skies for the ball game, Commencement, and for the boat race. The 1928 Class Day goes down in collegiate history as most unpleasant, from the "weather" point of view.

BUT "HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL." So today's bride, the charming Miss Emily Wentworth, looks forward to sunny skies when she arrives at Harvard Church to wed with Hugh Corby Fox late this afternoon. Wedding aftermath of long residence abroad, in various Continental capitals, looms pleasantly before this couple. Mr. Fox almost immediately sails away with his bride for an indefinite stay connected with his future career as one of Uncle Sam's budding diplomats.

TODAY'S BRIDE SHOULD shine in whatever place Mr. Fox eventually is called to. She has the poise, the charm and personality necessary to grace an exalted station. She is the daughter of Mrs. George Wentworth of Brookline, and paternal forbears furnish the lustre that descends from high academic attainments and honorable station. Her wedding entourage includes pretty maids, and interesting young matrons, certain of whom are still brides themselves.

MR. FOX'S LATE FATHER died some time ago, and his mother is now the Countess de Pourtales, with a chateau in Switzerland and high place in exalted Continental society circles. After the church ceremonial, guests offer felicitations to the newlyweds at the Algonquin Club and dance in their honor.

Jerge was by profession a bank robber, postoffice bandit and bootlegger, according to detectives. They are not sure whether he was killed for "squealing," or whether his death was due to a bootlegging feud, a quarrel among dope pedlars, or a row over a woman. It is sure to be one of those complications, say the detectives.

How body odor almost ruined my career

"I WAS selling on the road when the good news came. An inside job—opportunity—direct contact every day with the big boss.

"Everything went fine on my first day—until the chief called me into his office. He smiled a cordial welcome and asked for some figures. But when I leaned over his desk to show them to him he suddenly drew back. Without saying another word, he briefly dismissed me.

"Several days went by. Nothing new from the chief. It was rumored I was going on the road again. I couldn't understand.

I learned the truth

"Miserably worried I told my sister the whole story. And then came the shock that was to save me from business disaster.

"'Ed, I know what the whole trouble is. I noticed it at the dance the other night. It may hurt you—but I am going to tell you to your face what I am, sure others are saying behind your back.'

"And then she told me the real truth . . . body odor!"

No one is safe from body odor

Body odor is treacherous—it hurts us without our knowing it. Sets us back socially and in business in a humiliating way. And we cannot tell when we offend—because our own sense of smell becomes deadened to a familiar odor.

It's natural to perspire. It's healthful. Even in cool weather we perspire about a quart of odor-causing waste a day, doctors say. In addition, extreme heat, emotion or nervousness may cause excessive perspiration. Thus any one of us may be guilty unless we take care.

Purifying the pores

For all-day freshness—for bath-to-bath safety and confidence—use Lifebuoy Health Soap. You'll revel in its gloriously abundant lather. This pleasant antiseptic lather deeply deodorizes the pores. It prevents body odor not by neutralizing the odor—not by substituting another for it—but by purifying the pores.

Healthier complexions, too

This same bland, antiseptic Lifebuoy lather also purifies face pores—keeping complexions smooth, clear and glowingly fresh. Guards health, too—by removing germs.

You'll learn to love Lifebuoy's pleasant clean scent, which tells you it purifies, and which vanishes as you rinse. Use Lifebuoy a week and you'll use it for life. Get some today.

AMUNDSEN IS FORCED DOWN; CALLS HELP

In the absence of direct news from Amundsen it had been assumed he had decided not to stop at Kings Bay to refuel, but would continue over the ice fields off the northern coast of Spitzbergen to search for the Nobile party.

Two other planes have been making intermittent flights over the ice fields in search of Nobile. They are piloted by Lieut. Lutzow Holm and Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen.

Maj. Penso has reached Kings Bay in an Italian seaplane. It is expected he will join the search immediately.

The Russian ice breaker Malgin, which put out from Archangel with a seaplane aboard to look for the stranded explorers, ran into heavy ice packs and was compelled to proceed very slowly, according to a radiogram picked up at Riga.

Maj. Maddalena, flying the Italian seaplane Savoia-Marchetti-55, made a second reconnaissance trip from Kings Bay today in an attempt to communicate directly with Nobile by radio, and will drop smoke bombs.

Yesterday Nobile reported by radio he had seen Maddalena's plane in the air about a mile away. This was the third time Nobile had reported seeing rescue planes that could not locate him. Twice previously he had seen the planes of Riiser-Larsen and Holm.

WILDA BENNETT WILL TELL TALE OF WOE TO JURY

New York, June 20 (INS)—A Supreme Court jury is to hear more about the sad plight of winsome Wilda Bennett, actress, and—so she says—prey of an international gang of blackmailers.

Her tragic predicament caused her—so she says—to barricade herself in Mrs. Charlotte King Palmer's apartment and keep several savage police dogs near her as a bodyguard.

The jury, sitting before Justice Jeremiah Mahoney, may retire before nightfall to decide whether, as Mrs. Palmer claims, the actress did damage of $4000 to her apartment.

Pretty Wilda, her eyes dilating expressively, was positive that her melodramatic precautions, which made a fortress of the Palmer home, saved her from the blackmailers, who threatened repeatedly to hurl acid in her face unless they received $100,000.

Four letters, came she said—

And for three months thugs with caps pulled closely over their eyes stalked in front of the house—

And sometimes as many as four of these "horrible men" trailed her in automobiles.

Wilda goes on with her story:

"Soon after I leased the apartment from Mrs. Palmer and moved in, on September 1, 1921, I began to receive the letters.

"I was greatly afraid that members of the gang would carry out their threat to break into my room and throw acid in my face. I had no intention to comply with their demand for $100,000, but, nevertheless, I got very little sleep.

"I hired police dogs and kept them chained in my rooms."

QUIZ SUSPECT ABOUT BRIDGEPORT STABBINGS

New York, June 20 (AP)—A midnight stabbing of a 20-year-old girl milliner resulted in the arrest of William Katruck, 35, an unemployed garage worker, and his questioning by police today about operations of the "phantom stabber" of Bridgeport, Ct.

Katruck denied attacking Miss Estelle Ozdoba, who was cut about the face and hands as she walked along Central Park with her mother and a sister. Katrick insisted he had nothing to do with the Bridgeport assailant who has struck at more than a score of victims in years. He said he had recently been in Philadelphia. He was held, charged with felonious assault. The girl was not seriously injured.

MISSING BANK MAN GIVES UP TO POLICE

Amato Pescosolido, Newton banker, missing since the crash o fthe Nonantum Bankers' Company, today surrendered to Inspector Goode at Newton police headquarters.

He was arraigned on two warrants charging larceny of $200 from Dr. Alfred Amendola and of $2000 from the Columbus Realty Company by uttering a forged instrument.

Without accepting a plea, Judge Bacon continued the case to June 25, fixing bail at $5000 on the uttering charge and $500 on the other. . . .

Later, after the judge had left, Bank Examiner Bond, who is working on the books of the closed Italian bank, telephoned that an unfinished audit revealed a great shortage, and he would like to be heard on the question of bail.

Pescosolido is being held at Newton police headquarters on the authority of Clerk of Court Francis W. Sprague until the matter of bail can be taken up again with Judge Bacon.

Pescosolido, director of the Nonantum Bankers' Co., and former head of its predecessor, Pescosolido & Co., fled nearly two weeks ago after his life was said to have been threatened by an irate depositor.

That day the Nonantum Bankers' Co., located in Nonantum, a part of Newton, was taken over by Bank Commissioner Roy A. Hovey.

Last night Pescosolido, who lives in Newtonville ave., Newtonville, telephoned Inspector Goode and arranged to surrender on the two warrants. If he succeeds in obtaining bail the police plan to guard him from possible violence by depositors of the bank, many of whom fear they have lost all their savings.

POWER TRUST'S SOCIAL LOBBY

All this work is directed by women's information committees throughout the country, sponsored and controlled by the public relations section of the National Electric Light Association, dominant organization of the power lobby.

Some of the women used are wives of officials or employes of utility companies; most are themselves employes.

"A plea for the companies to hire, 'not just stenographers and clerks, but ambassadors to the public,' was made last year by E. E. Armstrong of the Mississippi Power Company, president of the light association's southwestern division.

E. H. Kifer, a former president, put it this way:

"Inasmuch as it is the housewife who usually starts complaints of light bills, etc., it was thought that by this women's information bureau the gospel of public utilities can be gotten into the home."

"The women will become customers instead of employes, and having once worked for the company their opinions will carry great weight with all of the other housewives with whom they come in contact," Armstrong said in an address in the commission's record.

"More important even than this is the fact that these women will be training the next generation in their first impressions of the public utility business, and childhood convictions are lasting.

STAMPEDE OF ELEPHANTS CAUSES NEW HAVEN PANIC

New Haven, June 20 AP)—Circus employes and citizens scattered in all directions when six bull elephants broke away from a herd of 40 here today while being taken to the Barnum, Bailey and Ringling show grounds in Hamden. "Young Joe," the most aggressive of the six, remained defiant long after the others had been captured and was eventually left securely chained to a large tree while the herd moved on to the circus grounds.

AMELIA HOPPED SEAS AS 'PART OF VACATION'

London, June 20 (AP)—On a vacation, as she expresses it, Miss Amelia Earhart intends to improve herself in her profession. She hopes to see how England carries on its social service work, which she says is her profession.

Receiving the acclaim of London, the first woman to fly the Atlantic expressed a desire to visit the various settlements, and especially Toynbee Hall, educational and social center in London's East Side.

Newspapermen interviewing her did not seem to understand why Miss Earhart had flown the Atlantic with Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon in the Friendship and asked many questions in an effort to determine the reason.

She denied that her flight had been a race with Mabel Boll to see which would cross the ocean first. She stated emphatically that she did not intend to capitalize on her adventure by entering the motion pictures or going on the vaudeville stage.

Was it true, asked one reporter, that she made the flight to obtain funds to lift the mortgage on the family homestead in America?

"No," said Miss Earhart, "that's absurd."

"My profession is social work. This is my vacation."

"But since you have prohibition in America, you should have no social problems," another reporter said.

"Unfortunately, we still have a few," she replied.

Girl Safe in Air Accident Breaks Leg on Horse

Escaping without injury during the forced landing of an airplane in which she was a passenger Saturday, Miss Lilias Moriarty, Brookline society girl and art student, is in St. Elizabeth's Hospital today with a broken leg suffered when she was thrown from a horse.

"I think I'll stick to the air hereafter; it's safer," she said at the hospital.

The forced landing of the plane occurred in Stoneham. She was thrown from her horse the next day while visiting friends on the Cape.

While attending art school, Miss Moriarty has been living at 65 Commonwealth ave., under the chaperonage of Mrs. Archibald Maines.

Blindfold test of leading cigarettes convinces Miss Mary Brown Warburton that OLD GOLD is best

"I was rather skeptical of this blindfold test, both because I always smoke with a holder, and because I ordinarily detest smoking in the dark. So I took plenty of time for each cigarette . . . but none of them quite satisfied my taste until I came to OLD GOLD. Its smoothness and its freedom from throat irritation appealed to me at once."

Mary Brown Warburton

MISS MARY BROWN WARBURTON . . . . granddaughter of John Wanamaker

How this test was made

THE test was conducted by the representative of a leading Eastern University and a disinterested witness selected by them. Miss Warburton was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands while blindfolded, clearing her taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked: "Which one do you like best?"

Why you can pick them . . .

Made from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant

These types of leaves grow on the tobacco plant . . . coarse top-leaves, irritating to the throat . . . withered ground-leaves, without taste or aroma: . . . and the heart-leaves, rich in cool and fragrant smoking qualities. Only the heart-leaves are used in OLD GOLDS.

100,000 GREET BREMEN FLIERS AT BERLIN FIELD

Berlin, June 20 (INS)—Escorted by 25 planes and greeted by a salute of 20 guns, the crew of the German transatlantic airplane Bremen arrived here this afternoon from Bremen in the sister ship Europa. When the Europa settled down upon Temperhofer flying field at 2:15 o'clock the flyers—Hiinz von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl and Maj. James Fitzmaurice—were welcomed by a thunder of cheers from 100,000 throats.

German, Irish and American flags were flying everywhere. National, state and municipal officials and two ambassadors—the American and British—were on hand to extend felicitations.

ONE SLAIN IN PARLIAMENT

Budapest, Hungary, June 20 (AP)—The newspaper Az Est, in a report from Belgrade, reports that Paul Raditch, nephew of the peasant leader, Stefan Raditch, was killed in the Belgrade Skupitchina (Parliament) by the radical deputy, Punisa Racic.

The paper says two other men were wounded in the melee.

Twenty-three deputies of the government party in parliament had presented a petition to the president of parliament asking that Stefan Raditch, long a storm center of Jugoslavian politics, be examined by alienists with a view to determining his sanity.

The action followed an uproar in parliament caused by Raditch remarking that deputies were always absent when important measures are voted upon.

HOOVER'S KIN TO WED HUB GIRL

Prof. Paul Leslie Hoover, a cousin of Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for President, has filed intentions to wed Miss Florence Brunton, 8 Florida st., Dorchester.

Prof. Hoover, who is stopping at the home of his intended bride, gave his birthplace as Mansfield, O., his father's name William H. Hoover, also born at Mansfield, O., and his mother's maiden name as Edreda Daubenspeck.

Miss Brunton is 36, employed as a clerk, and Prof. Hoover is 29.

Engineer Scalded

Pittsfield, June 20—Albert B. Hall, an engineer for the B. & A. Railroad and a resident of Rensselaer, was painfully scalded at Washington, when a cylinder head of the engine he was driving blew off. Both of his hands were burned. He was rushed by train to the House of Mercy Hospital in this city.

BROADCASTS SPEAKING PHOTO OF LABOR CHIEF

Chicago, June 20 (A.P.)—A successful broadcast of voice and television at the same time was made over station WCFL, Chicago Federation of Labor, in an experiment under a special permit issued by Samuel Pickard, Federal radio commissioner. A view of the head and shoulders of E. N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation, was broadcast with his voice and received by the inventors of the process, M. J. Hayes and Ulysses Znarbria, over their receiving apparatus located several miles distant.

26 DEAD IN BLAST DUE TO DRUNKEN ENGINEER

Mexico City, June 20 (AP)—Twenty-six bodies had been recovered today from the ruins of four buildings destroyed by the explosion of a boiler in a bathhouse. Thirty other persons were injured. An American, H. Kenneth Ferguson, employed by the Mexican Telephone Company, was among those injured. Police said a bathhouse attendant told them the explosion was due to the engineer turning cold water into the overheated boiler, which burst. Police were informed that the engineer was intoxicated.

"Bringing Up Father"

Jiggs and Maggie Are Here!

Jiggs, good-hearted Jiggs, always doing the wrong thing at the right time. Maggie, socially-ambitious Maggie, always doing the right thing at the wrong time . . . both trying to Ritz it, both trying to put on the dog . . . Jiggs, with his white spats and his high hat, but, alas, with an incurable yen for corned beef and cabbage; Maggie, with her lorgnette and her swell guests, but, alas, with an incurable yen for a rolling pin. Funny as they are in the cartoon, they're even funnier on the screen.

20 'HUSBAND' IN RING MYSTERY

A curious little boomerang came out of New York today in connection with the case of Myron Morris of that city, reported to the police yesterday as mysteriously missing from a Boston hotel.

The report was made by a woman who said she was the wife and who declared Morris had talked of death, and made his will with her as beneficiary, but had carried her $2500 diamond ring and $150 in cash with him when he departed.

Today the Boston police received the following telegram, signed "I. H. Kass, 33 Wadsworth ave., New York":

"Do you want Myron Morris for a crime committed in your city? If you do, wire the New York authorities to hold him. I am the legal husband of the complainant in this case."

The Wadsworth ave. address is the same one given by the woman as that of the missing Morris, her "husband."

Boston police telegraphed back to Kass that they have no charge or complaint against Morris. They informed Kass also that the woman calling herself Mrs. Morris left Boston for New York yesterday and that Morris, for all the police know, is still missing.

in guiding the big plane from California to Australia.

The Australian government voted $25,000 to the two pilots, in recognition of a country's gratitude for the work of its countrymen.

Contributors to the fund include the following:

Hearst newspapers	$5000.00
Gov. Alvan T. Fuller	25.00
Hon. Wellington Wells	15.00
Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols	10.00
Hon. Martin Hays	10.00
Gardiner H. Fiske, vice-chairman Boston Municipal Airboard	10.00
Rep. William J. Davison, Taunton	10.00
John F. Fitzgerald, former Mayor of Boston	10.00
E. E. Clive, managing director Copley Theatre	10.00
George H. Johnson	5.00
Dr. Francis X. Mahoney	5.00
City Clerk James Donovan	5.00
J. F. Curvivan	5.00
Frank Seiberlich, chairman Boston Election Commissioners	5.00
Francis E. Slattery, chairman Boston Schoolhouse Commission	5.00
Thomas H. Green, president Boston City Council	5.00
Dist. Atty. William J. Foley, Suffolk County	5.00
Atty. Robert Gallagher	5.00
Samuel Curtis, Jr.	5.00

Citing the work of the two Americans as "most important factors in the flight," Samuel Curtis, Jr., of the Samuel Curtis Radio School and Repair Laboratory, 673 Boylston st., Back Bay, sent his contribution to the fund as follows:

"The fund for the two Americans who flew across the Pacific in the Southern Cross, is characteristic of the support which the Hearst newspapers are giving to aviation.

"Navigation and radio are two of the most important factors in aviation development. Long distance flights depend primarily upon both of them.

"As a former radio editor of your paper, and being connected in 1921 with the radio department of the United States air mail service, I naturally feel an urge to co-operate in putting over this fund for Lyon and Warner.

"My check for $5 is herewith enclosed, and I'm sorry it couldn't be more."

YALE UNIVERSITY PAYS HONOR TO 15

New Haven, Ct., June 20 (AP)—Yale University today honored 15 men who have distinguished themselves in their chosen pursuits. Four of the recipients of honorary degrees were foreigners. They are Paul Claudel, poet and ambassador from France to the United States; George William Russell, who as "AE" is known the world over for his writings, paintings and statesmanship; Cornelius Ubbo Ariens Kappers, neurologist of Amsterdam, Holland, and Yu-Chen James Yen of Peking, who is credited with being the leader of the mass education movement in his country.

Ambassador Claudel and "AE" received the degree of doctor of letters, Kappers was given a doctor of science degree and Yen received the degree of master of arts.

John L. Lowes, professor of English at Harvard University, was made a doctor of letters.

Skinny Women

Don't Stand a Chance!

Gain pounds of weight in 3 weeks with new YEAST and IRON—or pay nothing

You don't want to be underweight, nervous and always tired—an object of pity to your friends. Start Ironized Yeast now and put pounds of good flesh on those bony arms, hollow cheeks and scraggy limbs. See ugly lines give way to graceful curves. Feel a new vitality and strength you haven't had for years.

Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one—weight-building Yeast and strengthening Iron.

The Yeast is the same used in making malt, and which makes malt so beneficial.

This yeast is treated with the same kind of Iron found in spinach, lettuce and celery. In this form Iron is easily assimilated by the body, making rich, red blood and toning up nerves and muscles.

Only when Yeast is Ironized in this way is it more effective—for Iron is needed to bring out the weight-building values of Yeast. By this formula Ironized Yeast gives you results in half the time required by Yeast and Iron taken separately.

Ironized Yeast brings pounds of weight in astonishingly quick time. Letters say: "10 pounds gained in 3 weeks." "one full treatment added 7 pounds." "11 pounds and better health." The blood is toned up, too, because the iron adds strength and richness to the blood, clearing up the complexion and increasing your vitality. Ironized Yeast comes only in pleasant-tasting tablets. Safe for everybody. Does not upset stomach nor cause gas or bloating.

Ask the druggist now for a full course treatment. It will prove that you can gain many pounds, or your money will be refunded. Be convenient to buy at the drug store, send $1.00 to Ironized Yeast Co., Atlanta, Ga., Desk 227-R.C.

Mothers' Interest Stirredby Life-Saving Drive

By FRANK A. GOODWIN
Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Second prize in the Mothers' Safety Don'ts contest conducted during the month of May by the Boston Evening American was won by Mrs. Margaret Berry, mother of three children, who lives at 12 Webster st., Lowell. She was awarded $10.

The city of Lowell made a good showing in the contest. Three other mothers of that city were among the 75 to be awarded $1 prizes and one of them, Mrs. Agnes Dejadon of 48 Pleiba st., received honorable mention.

F. A. Goodwin.

The other two Lowell prize winners were Mrs. Georgo E. Lawson of 37 Ellis ave., and Mrs. Marion Lowe of 103 Read st.

Mrs. Berry was as surprised to capture second prize as Mrs. Anna V. Gibson of Sterling Junction was to be awarded the first prize of $50.

"I think the contest was a service to the public," said Mrs. Berry. "If it saved the life of one child it was worth while. I understand that was the spirit in which the Boston Evening American conducted it.

"It was interesting and instructive. It aroused mothers and kindled their interest. It brought the lessons into the homes. As Mr. Goodwin says, the only way to be sure of safety is to keep everlastingly preaching it.

"Two of my sons are grown up. Charles E., who is 22, and Ernest M., who is 20. My daughter, Margaret, who is 11, is the only one I have to impress with the Safety Don'ts. She is a careful, obedient child. She attends Edson school.

"She was as pleased and surprised as I was to think I got second prize. I wish to thank the management of the Boston Evening American, not only for awarding me second prize, but most of all for conducting such a necessary and humane campaign. I follow Mr. Goodwin's articles every day and enjoy them."

HER SAFETY DON'TS

Mrs. Berry's ten Mothers' Safety Don'ts which the judges selected as the second best among thousands, follow:

(1) Don't play in the streets. Our cities are well provided with playgrounds.

(2) Don't steal rides on autos. Better to walk than NOT TO BE ABLE TO WALK.

(3) Don't cross the streets at random. Observe the traffic rules.

(4) Don't beg rides from autos. This brings you into the streets and highways and into peril.

(5) Don't disregard safety instructions. Much can be learned from the experience of others.

(6) Don't accept rides from strangers. This oft-times leads to grave results.

(7) Don't meddle with the family car. Brakes sometimes do not hold and you are helpless in an uncontrolled auto.

(8) Don't urge smaller children to run across the street. Remember they are less developed than you and more easily overcome by fright.

(9) Don't fear the policeman. Ask his aid when crossing busy streets, as he is your friend.

(10) Don't play around dump trucks and ice-laden trucks. These are a constant source of danger.

MOTHER WINS PRIZE

Mrs. Margaret Berry of 12 Webster st., Lowell, winner of second prize in the Mothers' Safety Don'ts contest, with her daughter, Margaret, 11. Mrs. Berry highly praises the Boston Evening American's campaign.

CUTS OFF HER DAUGHTER WHO HAD "COST ENOUGH"

Great Barrington, June 20—Declaring that her daughter, Elizabeth, already had cost her enough worry, trouble and expense, Mrs. Elizabeth Hind, in her will filed for probate today, cut off Mrs. Elizabeth Snyder without a cent, leaving her entire estate to her other three children.

LYNCH NEGRO, WOUNDED

Houston, Texas, June 20 (A.P.)—Robert Powell, 24, wounded negro slayer of City Detective A. W. Davis, was taken from Jefferson Davis Hospital here early today by eight unmasked men, who held the negro's guard, Deputy Sheriff S. Y. Q. Brizendine at bay with pistols.

After taking the negro, who was seriously shot in a gun battle last Sunday morning in which Davis was killed, the men fled in automobiles. They hung him to a bridge.

Brizendine said three of the men covered him with their pistols and told him to "keep quiet and don't make a move." He was then disarmed.

As he was taken away, the officer said one of the men rushed to the negro's bed and placed a rope around the prisoner's neck. With the negro begging for mercy, he was carried from the hospital.

NEW NASH CAR WILL BE SHOWN TOMORROW

The new Nash motor car "400" series, enthusiastically welcomed by 750 New England dealers at the wholesale warehouse of C. P. Rockwell, Inc., New England distributors, will be introduced to the public tomorrow at exhibitions in Nash showrooms in every city, according to announcement by C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motor Company. "After June 21, the world will have no finer motor car than this new Nash," was the company president's message to the dealers. Arthur Winn, wholesale manager for C. P. Rockwell, Inc., and R. H. McCarty, vice-president in charge of sales for the Nash Motors Company, described the mechanical innovations and the wonderful reception given the new models wherever seen all over the country.

BISHOP SHAHAN NAMED ASSISTANT TO THRONE

Rome, June 20 (AP)—Monsignor Thomas Joseph Shahan, titular bishop of Germanicopolis and widely known educator, has been named assistant bishop to the pontifical throne by a decree appearing today.

Mons. Shahan has been rector of the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., since 1909.

MOTORMAN KILLED BY RUNAWAY CAR

Cranston, R. I., June 20 (AP)—Frederick Bacon, motorman, was instantly killed by his own car when it started a mad runaway dash as he was standing in the track changing the trolley at the end of his run. Quick action by John F. Meighan, conductor, prevented the car crashing into a heavily-laden car on the same track.

Bootleggers' Wives, Beware!

Springfield, June 20 (AP)—Unless a bootlegger imbibes too much of his own goods, he is immune from being divorced for occupational reasons. Judge Lummus so ruled on a wife's complaint.

FREIGHT WRECK BLOCKS B. & M.

Zoar, June 20—Leaping the rails a quarter of a mile west of Zoar station today, an engine and 19 cars of a heavy eastbound freight train piled up across both tracks of the Boston & Maine railroad.

No one was injured, the engineer and fireman remaining in the cab of the locomotive while it tore up the roadbed for several hundred yards before coming to a stop.

Several of the cars loaded with coal and cement toppled down an embankment and others were broken up on the roadbed, depositing their freight over the right of way. Railroad officials said it would be nightfall at least before the line was cleared for traffic in either direction.

The train was of 72 cars, bound from Mechanicsville, N. Y., to Portland, Me.

HE WORKS DAYS, AND SHE WORKS NIGHTS

New York, June 20 (AP)—Gertrude Lawrence, English musical comedy star, in torn twist love and duty. When Bertram Taylor, broker, greeted her affectionately at a pier, she admitted they had discussed marriage, but she added: "I don't know what I'll do. I don't want to give up the stage. It is not right to marry a man who works all day, getting home just in time to bid farewell when I start for the theater."

DON MASKS TO FIGHT FIRE

Firemen donned gas masks to battle a stubborn blaze early today in the stock room of the J. W. Gerry Co., wall paper manufacturers at 63 Franklin st.

The fire, of undetermined origin, was confined to the fourth floor of the six-story building, but poisonous fumes from the burning paper spread through the entire building. Deputy Chief Henry J. Power ordered all who entered the building to wear masks.

Damage was estimated at $2000.

A few hundred dollars wisely invested in Boston real estate now will be worth thousands in a few years. See the wonderful property values offered today in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads.

MAIL ROBBERS GET $100,000

Toronto, Ont., June 20 (AP)—Six armed men who in a daring midnight holdup escaped with registered mail valued as high as $100,000, were being sought today. The robbery was of an express car on the Canadian National Railways in the Union station here.

Entrance to the car was gained on the pretense that the robbers wanted to sell a large sedan automobile they had backed up to the car. They quickly covered the express messengers and selecting three registered mail pouches, tossed the bags into their car and sped away.

Police in another machine gave chase, but were unable to overtake the robbers' car.

One of the stolen bags contained cash and the other two registered mail.

Nominating Speech For Reed Will Urge 'Pick a Fighter'

Kansas City, June 20 (AP)—The speech at the Democratic convention in Houston next week nominating Senator James A. Reed for the presidency will be an appeal to "pick a fighter to do the job," in view of the "fighting" campaign ahead. This was indicated today by Charles M. Howell, Kansas City lawyer, who will make the speech.

Howell will tell the convention that "Hoover is made to order for Reed," and that the Missourian "ideally fits the situation from a national standpoint and not from the standpoint of state or section."

THREE DIE IN GANGS' WAR

Chicago, June 20 (AP)—Gangland guns, dusty through weeks of truce, spat death to three men yesterday.

John (Bowlegs) Oliveri and Joseph Salamone were "put on the spot" near Death Corner, Milton and West Oak sts., where gang retribution has been exacted in the past. A man stood in the window of an apartment and slowly tipped his hat. It was a signal to two men who loitered on a porch across the street. Oliveri and Salamone fell under a shower of lead from two repeating shotguns.

The double assassination was executed in daylight. The third slaying of the day took place on the South Side behind the curtain of night. James Reggi, 23, staggered from an alley with revolver bullets in his arm and chest. Though conscious until death he refused to name his assailant.

Here's instant relief at last! New scientific treatment, called Ercolin, banishes runny eyes and nose, sneezing, blisters on eyes, headaches, fever, etc., almost before you know it. Guaranteed relief — or money back. Get Ercolin at once and TRY it. All good drug stores.

Frigidaire

FOOD PRESERVATION SHOW

Jordan Marsh Company invites you to visit this amazing exhibit, which has been arranged through the courtesy of Frigidaire Corporation division of General Motors for the people of Boston

No simple task to buy, cook and prepare food for 1095 meals a year—yet this is a duty that the average housewife must perform. It's a big problem to preserve all this food in a healthy condition, for it's a fact that foods deteriorate whether they are raw or cooked, liquid or solid. Every housewife should know the most approved methods for food preservation and that's where this educational exhibit comes to her aid. Foods to be kept properly should be preserved in a temperature range between 32 and 50 degrees. We invite every housewife to visit this educational display and learn one of the secrets of food economy—proper refrigeration.

We have a remarkable microscopic motion picture . . . a real "thriller" but not fiction . . . of living organisms which are magnified 57,000 times. Then we show you how modern refrigeration is a safeguard against this menace . . . how Frigidaire provides the low temperatures that keep foods fresh and wholesome at all times.

Don't miss this amazing exhibition. Nothing like it has ever been shown in Boston. Come in any day. Bring your friends.

The research work on which this exhibit is based has been conducted in co-operation with the food Technology Division of the Department of Biology and Public Health at the MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY.

The WOLF-MAN of PARIS

Story of Love and the French Revolution

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

ORDERED by the Tribunal of the French Revolution in the town of Poussignot to get married within three days to a maidservant in his chateau, in order to prove his sound republican sentiments, the former Vicomte de Corbal has decided as he walks away from the town that the only self-respecting course for him is to refuse to obey the mandate of the court and therefore accept the death penalty.

CHAPTER XIV

CORBAL mounted a stile over a wall bordering one of his meadows, and as he leapt lightly down upon the turf, he was suddenly aware of a figure crouching there in the gloom. A moment he stood at gaze, then called out, challenging, whereupon the figure came upright, detached itself from the wall, and was off at top speed across the narrow strip of meadowland towards the woods.

Here, thought Monsieur de Corbal, was an eccentricity of behavior that called for investigation. He was swift of foot, and he was upon the fugitive before the later had covered half the distance to his goal. He clutched the shoulder of a stripling, clad in the blouse, loose pantaloons, and wooden shoes of a peasant.

"A word with you, my friend. You are too fleet for honesty, to say nothing of your skulking behind a wall."

"Let me go," snarled a boyish voice. "I have done you no harm." The figure writhed in his grasp. "Don't dare to detain me!"

"Dare!" Corbal laughed. "Here's fury!"

There was more fury than the vicomte reckoned. Something bright gleamed suddenly in the boy's hand. On the instant Corbal had him in a wrestler's grip which pinned his arms helplessly to his sides. He hugged the murderous rascal close, intending to throw him. Instead, as if contact with that young body had burnt him, he thrust it sharply from him, and stepped back.

"Name of Heaven!" he ejaculated. The supposed stripling stood before him, breathing hard with head a little bowed, making no further attempt to escape.

"Who are you? What are you? And why are you dressed as a man? Answer me. I will not hurt you."

The sudden gentleness of his voice, more, its high-bred inflection, wrought a change in the other's attitude. He threw back his head, showing a face that gleamed white and ghostly in the half-light.

"Who are you? What is your name?" came the counter-questions, in a voice and delivered on a note which left Corbal little doubt of the masquerader's quality.

"Until lately I was known as the Vicomte Corbigny de Corbal. Since then I have enjoyed a certain peace as a ci-devant. At the moment I scarcely know how to describe myself. But this land is still mine, and that hugs up yonder, in which I am prepared to afford you shelter if you will deal frankly with me."

"You are a gentleman!"

"You may call me that, I hope.'

"A gentleman at large in France!' Almost she seemed to laugh. "But it is a bewildering encounter."

"Mutually bewildering," said he. "I was not, myself, expecting to meet a lady."

He heard the sharp intake of her breath. "How do you know that?"

"How? I have my intuitions. They are not to be deceived by rude garments and eccentric manners. I am at your service, madame—or, is it mademoiselle?"

She hesitated long before passionately answering him: "Oh, if you are a trickster, play your vile trick. It's all one to me. I am sick and weary. I should welcome even such

HUNT MISSING MAINE MOTHER IN HUB

CARE URGED IN BUYING TONICS FOR CHILDREN

D. K. P. N. Mullowny

Director Hearst Health Laboratory

The careful mother must keep a watchful eye on the hot-weather foodstuffs that are offered for sale to her little ones.

The temptation to give way to the children who plead, "Aw, mother, can't I have an ice cream cone or a drink of tonic," is not to be resisted.

The day has been over-burdeningly warm, and the little ones have suffered from the activities of their normal play.

A cooling beverage in moderation, or an ice cream cone that is wholesome is a helpful relief, but care must be taken to see that the foodstuffs offered for sale are desirable.

Safety for the consumer lays in dealing only with responsible concerns, vending a high quality product. Pay particular attention to labels on the tonic bottles.

Dr. P. H. Mullowny

Good tonic has a high place in food values. Carbon dioxide used to carbonate water inhibits the growth of bacteria, yeasts and molds, and tends to clear up the colon group. Many physicians believe it tends to lessen nausea and gastric distress.

INSECT CONES

Not only tonic should be given careful attention, but ice cream cones as well. Cones offered for sale should be kept in containers properly protected from possible contamination by dirt, dust and flies, so that there is no rancid taste or odor, indicating that the cones are of old manufacture.

I recall an instance where, under my direction, the local health inspectors made a seizure of an immense quantity of rancid ice cream cones.

These cones had been received in the city from another state. A careful tracing back gave me reason to believe that the cones were the very same as the ones which had been through a fire in this city several years before.

Sought 3 Weeks

Mrs. Hilda Holz of Ellsworth, Me., mother of two children, is sought in Boston. She has been missing for three weeks.

New York Man Dies in Paris

New York, June 20 (AP)—William Rutherford Mead, New York architect and president of the American Academy in Rome, died in Paris today. He had sailed to Europe six weeks ago with his wife and had been in Paris about two weeks.

FOUL PLAY FEARED BY HUSBAND

Search is being made in Boston and other cities for Mrs. Hilda Holz, wife of an Ellsworth, Me., business man, and mother of two children, who is reported by her husband mysteriously missing for three weeks.

She left home telling her daughter, Frances, that she was going shopping in Bangor and leaving the girl to take care of a four-year-old sister, Doris.

Because she had left home for brief periods previously, according to her husband, search was not begun immediately, but Holz now fears foul play. His wife had two diamond rings, a wrist watch and a small sum of money with her.

The missing woman is 28 years old, 5 feet 9 inches, 168 pounds, has blonde bobbed hair and is said to be extremely good looking.

Fitzroy New Speaker

London, June 20 (AP)—The House of Commons unanimously elected Captain Algernon Fitzroy, Conservative member for Daventry, Northamptonshire, as speaker in succession to John H. Whitley who recently resigned.

Romance With a Girl He Never Saw Takes Him Back to Jail

New York, June 20 (AP)—A romance with a girl he never saw has led to the recapture of Frank McDougle, escaped Alabama convict. McDougle, while serving a sentence in Kirby prison, Montgomery County, Ala., for receiving stolen goods, started a correspondence with a girl in Astoria, L. I., through a "pen pals" department of a magazine. He gave his address as Kirby Camp and told her he was an engineer engaged in a big construction project. Last October he escaped but continued to correspond with the girl from various cities. As he left each town he wrote where he would be next. The girl lost his address and wrote to Kirby Camp. The prison authorities got the letter and the New York police were notified. They established a watch at the girl's house and when he arrived he was arrested.

PORTLAND CITY MANAGER NATIVE OF SOMERVILLE

James E. Barlow, native of Somerville and civil engineer of note, has been named as city manager of Portland, Me., to take office July 1 at a salary of $10,000. Born in Somerville in 1881, Mr. Barlow was graduated from Phillips-Andover Academy in 1901, and from M. I. T. in 1905. He became an instructor at the institute for a year, and then for three years instructed at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. Mr. Barlow was employed in constructing the Charles river dam in Boston, and was associated with other important engineering projects, later becoming manager of Dayton, O., and New London, Ct.

DOGS BITE 5; RABIES FEARED

Three dogs that have bitten five persons in Somerville were quarantined today by Inspector of Animals Charles M. Berry of that city, pending report on the head of a fourth dog from the Harvard Medical School.

The dog whose head is being examined for rabies was shot at Medford and Washington sts., Somerville, by Policeman Dennis Kearney after an unidentified girl had been bitten.

Previously, seven-year-old Edna Sherry of Heath st., Mrs. Mary Bryson and her son, Joseph, four, of Mercliam st.; Joseph E. Hurt of Allen st., Roy Bovene, seven, Mercliam st., Somerville, had been bitten.

The three dogs responsible were placed under quarantine by police.

SMITH AND POMERENE SILENT AFTER MEETING

New York, June 20—Former U. S. Senator Atlee Pomerene, Ohio's candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, called on Governor Alfred E. Smith at the governor's suite at the Biltmore Hotel. Neither would indicate what was discussed during the visit, which was brief.

NORTHEASTERN SENDS OUT 470 GRADUATES

President Frank Palmer Speare of Northeastern will confer 427 degrees and award 43 diplomas to graduates of the five schools in the university at the annual commencement exercises in the Boston Opera House before 3000 tonight. Four hundred and seventy graduates this year sets a new record, being 50 more than a year ago. This is the 27th for the School of Law, which had the largest graduating class, comprising 178, of whom 22 were women.

William F. Kehoe

Gerald R. Tatton

William G. Thompson

Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education, will be commencement speaker, with Rev. Charles W. Hawke, executive secretary of the Northeastern Student Union, giving the invocation.

Only two students, Alison L. Killam, East Lynn, and Samuel E. Lowell Jr., Bridgewater, both from the School of Engineering, were to be graduated with high honor. Killam, a member of the Senate, the Boston Society of Civil Engineers and track team and photographic editor of the Cauldron, is the brother of Miss Bern E. Killam, only girl to be graduated from the School of Commerce and Finance.

Sixteen students will be graduated with honor from the School of Engineering and four with honor from the School of Business Administration. The School of Law will confer five degrees cum laude, one of the recipients being a woman, Miss Pauline Swain, South Boston.

Supreme Court Clerk Dies

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Philander R. Stansbury, deputy clerk of the United States Supreme Court, who had been connected with it since 1883 and is known to all lawyers who have had business with the court since that time, died suddenly at his home near Rockville, Md., early today.

Again a pioneer in public safety activity!

The Boston Evening American—New England's Greatest Evening Newspaper—Always Active in the Cause of Public Safety—Now Takes a Practical Step in the Protection of the People of New England Against the Consequences of Injury and Death Resulting from Accidents. Endorsed by Civic and Business Leaders—The Plan Is Commended as a Real Public Service—A Fitting Climax to One of the Most Intensive Safety Campaigns in the History of New England

A $10,000 ACCIDENT INSURANCE POLICY FOR ONE DOLLAR

ONE MILLION POLICIES TO BE DISTRIBUTED TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW ENGLAND

Determined to impress the need of safety afterward as well as first on every New England family and to save the family from some of the dread consequences of accident, the Boston Evening American has undertaken a great public service.

It is the unexpected that happens and anyone may be a victim, yet statistics show that scarcely 2% of those killed or injured in accidents have made any preparation for those who depend upon them. No man who is daily subjected to accident (and this includes nearly every man) has the right to leave his family or dependents unprotected.

To eliminate this condition, the Boston Evening American has arranged to distribute one million $10,000 accident insurance policies to the people of New England at ONE DOLLAR. No family in New England need deny itself the peace of mind and the sense of security that come from knowing that there is ample protection against privation and want in case of accident.

This Boston Evening American plan to eliminate the hardships caused by accident has met the hearty approval and endorsement of New England's civic and business leaders.

PROTECT YOURSELF

876,000 persons are under sentence of death by accident during the next ten years.

23 persons are accidentally injured every minute; 1,380 every hour; 33,120 every day.

One person is accidentally killed every six minutes; 240 every day; 87,600 every year.

More than 7,000 passengers and employes are killed each year in railroad accidents.

Accidents occur 113 times as often as fires.

One person in every nine meets with some form of accidental injury each year.

One death in 11 results from an accident.

Automobiles kill 26,800 persons each year.

It is a most practical climax to the most vigorous drive for public safety in the history of New England—an out and out offer to provide the most liberal iron-clad insurance policy we have been able to discover. One dollar covers everything—not one cent more—no strings or conditions. Every cent of this dollar goes to the North American Accident Insurance Company, the policy underwriters -- the oldest and largest health and accident insurance company in America. You get the policy at cost—the Boston Evening American bears all expenses of distribution.

It is your solemn duty to protect your dependents. Here is your opportunity to do so at a cost of $1. Play safe! Get your policy now by filling out the coupon below and sending it with your registration fee of $1 to the Boston Evening American.

OLYMPICS GOAL OF CALIFORNIA CREW

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

DEVOTED TO ACCURACY, INTEREST AND NEWS THE DAY IT HAPPENS

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN — WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1928

"SPEED boat racing is the latest summer sport craze," said Mr. Boston as he stepped into town from Cape Cod today. "It furnishes the next best thrill to doing a loop-the-loop in an airplane.

"In the old days, it was the fashion to take the family dory and row until the muscles of the back and arms cried out for a rest. Then came the yacht and motor boat. Now unless one has a speed boat he doesn't belong.

"One thing I like about speed boats, yachts, motor boats and other sea or rivergoing craft is that they keep one in the open air and sunshine. The same goes for a horse, airplane, auto, bike and sulky.

"It has taken city folks a long time to wake up to the fact that fresh air and sunshine are the best cures for what happens to be wrong with them. The doctors can give artificial assistance, but the 100 per cent kind of health is gained in the great outdoors.

"I believe that most people who play golf do so just to get outdoors. The average golfer, who takes a 120 for 18 holes, isn't worrying about driving Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen or Francis Ouimet out of business. They are out there on the links taking the sunshine, walking miles over beautiful country and breathing in clear health-giving air so as to build up their vitality.

"I must admit that speedboat racing has got a little something on most of the other sports. One gets a wonderful thrill as he flies along the water. With the speed one only thought could be gained in an automobile.

"But we don't have to have a speed boat to get a thrill out of a spanking breeze of wave. Take the motor boats and kids for a sail down the harbor, or get in with the youngsters in a swimmers' ride at the Public Gardens. In any event, keep out of doors as much as possible when the skies are bright and the sun is shining down from the heavens.

"I know even the doctors will be inspired by doing as you injure their business. For after all if you keep healthy the family doctor can go away on a few fishing and hunting trips himself. And mercy knows, most of them need a rest after a winter and spring filled with more than their share of sickness."

MR. BOSTON received the following in his mail today:

"I am a college professor. I reached my present position in life after years of study. My salary is $4000 a year.

"I read in your column that Gus Sonnenberg is receiving $7500 for his heavyweight wrestling championship match with Strangler Lewis in Boston on June 28. I wish to congratulate Sonnenberg that he took up wrestling rather than teaching for a livelihood when he graduated from Dartmouth. He will find that public appreciates a man more if he can beat somebody in a test of strength than it does if he is merely a educated intellectual.

"I believe, unlike Paul Bowser, that a man with a college education has a better chance to succeed in athletics than the illiterate, provided, of course, that the college man also has a powerful physique.

"I have received considerable pleasure as Sonnenberg has won 38 bouts. May he also defeat Lewis.

(Signed) "A $4000-a-Year Intellectual."

"THE success of Sonnenberg has caused many other college athletes to turn to wrestling," said Mr. Boston. "Paul Bowser tells me that since Dynamite started tipping over the opposition that a flock of former college football heroes have been asking him to give them tryouts on the mat. In another year, I would not be surprised if Bowser has enough material to stage a special wrestling tournament between former college men.

"The fact Sonnenberg has earned $40,000 in 38 bouts and stands to pick up $7500 more when he battles Lewis are the real reasons behind the new interest of the college athletes in wrestling. Nowadays people prefer to make big money in athletics rather than to get a mere living performing the tasks of an intellectual.

"As one bright reporter remarked: 'It wasn't necessary to ask that the Harvard Stadium be enlarged to care for the people who wished to attend one of the track tests between Harvard and Yale.' After all, man is still somewhat of a primitive savage with a strong desire for real meat and insane excitement. Wrestling and football furnish the excitement."

Wykoff Hailed as Marvel by Paddock

By CHARLEY PADDOCK

THOUGH 24 hours and 1000 miles already separate me from the Southwest Olympic tryouts neither time nor space can dim the luster of one brilliant memory that this great meet afforded.

The picture in my mind is of a fair-haired, 18-year-old boy named Frank Wykoff, of Glendale high school, who, in repose is a mild-mannered, modest youth with a pleasing smile and a charming personality, but in action he is a fighting, clawing, frenzied animal who refuses to linger long with his fellow-competitors, but must be flying out in front of them from start to finish.

I watched him Saturday (from the rear) in the 100 and 200-meter races and never in all my experience of games have I ever seen a man go as fast as he did in the last 20 yards. He was a cannonball leaping faster than a swooping bird, quicker than thought.

AFTER that he was good, but not superhuman—he didn't have to be. He was so far ahead that he could not be overtaken. The time of 10 1-5 seconds, in the hundred meters was fast. We good as Abrahams made it in the Olympic finals when he set the 1-4 record. Bowman made it in the American Olympic tryouts when he had his great day. And Wykoff's 20 4-5 seconds in the 200 meters established a new record and proved he and any doubt that I've had as to his present form by will be the sensation of the Boston Games and Amos as their pet sprinter will be heartbroken.

I knew of Frank Wykoff was good and I even suspected that he could run in the heights I was prepared for a surprise in his second. I believe I came close to doing so. I felt that I could run the 200 meters in 21 seconds and I did slightly better than that. But my best last Saturday was not good enough though I felt in great physical condition I was pleased with my starting in the 200 meters. I left my holes even with Wykoff only to lose him at the 150-yard mark.

With my start perfected and with these races under my belt, I hope to be able to run the Glendale white wind a closer race at Boston. Bob Maxwell and I are now en route East with the idea of getting as much condition and competition before our final tryouts as possible.

CALIFORNIA NAVY SEEKS NEW HONOR

Poughkeepsie Victor Out to Win Right to Represent U. S. at Amsterdam

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 20 (AP)—California has just begun to row.

The new rowing champions, instead of resting on their speed and record-breaking honors, thrilled gained over Columbia and five other rivals in the mist and rain last evening look forward to their conquering efforts in the fortnight ahead.

On the strength of their startling exhibition of stamina in outrowing two champions in a single spell, record in shattering the 27-year-old record for the four-mile race, upon the Columbia boat as the first public event of their training will be on the new Olympic course at Penn Valley July 3 and 7 to select the American crew for the Olympic regatta at Amsterdam.

California is the first eastern crew in the history of the intercollegiate championship regatta, was scored over the gruelling four-mile route, whereas the Olympic tests are at 2000 meters or approximately a mile and a quarter.

CREW HAS EVERYTHING

This means that the Bears now must cut down their racing strategy and form from the endurance distance to the sprint rout, but none of the downing crowd of 75,000 spectators who saw them row a hard pressing five last evening doubted they'd do it.

If ever it seemed that a crew had everything—stamina, speed, courage and generalship—it was California. The boys with the men who composed the shell in the running of the Lehigh and Navy, the Rose Bowl football champions—are as great a combination as the east ever has seen and the east has grown accustomed to seeing great eras, particularly those of Washington, come out of the far west to lead the big parade at Poughkeepsie.

The Bears beat a fine crew in the Columbia eight, the boatload that won the race a year ago, a gallant crew that went down fighting to the last ditch and that will give [illegible] any other crew a battle for the right to compete in the Olympics.

The [illegible] struggle between Columbia and California for the [illegible] championship was a thriller from start to finish. CALIFORNIA'S RECORD-BREAKING CREW

OFF TO A RACING START

The coast won new athletic honors when the University of California crew broke the Poughkeepsie record, leading Columbia, Washington, Cornell, Navy, Syracuse and Penn to the line. The Californians broke Cornell's old record that has stood for 27 years. The old record of 18:53 1-5 seconds was established on July 2, 1901. The coast crew clipped 17 2-5 seconds off that mark. The winning crew was boated as follows: Marvin Staider, cox; Jack Brinck, No. 2; Francis Frederick, No. 3; James Workman, No. 4; William Dolly, No. 5; William Thompson, No. 6; Hubert Caldwell, No. 7; Peter Donlan, stroke.

Murphy Is at Weight for His Title Battle With Mello

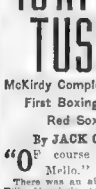
NOTABLES TO ATTEND TUSSLE

McKirdy Completes Plans for First Boxing Show at Red Sox Park

By JACK CONWAY

"OF course I'll lick Al Mello."

There was an air of certainty in Billy Murphy's tone. He seemed sure of his own ability. He was discussing his New England welterweight championship battle with the title holder which will be staged under the direction of the Arena A. C. at Fenway Park tomorrow night.



Jack Conway

Murphy had just finished his heavy training for the match at a camp outside of Lowell. From now until he faces the champion he will take things easy.

"I have always been confident going into battle, but I have never been as sure of myself as I am now," said Murphy quietly. "Mello is one fighter I know I can beat. His assets are punching power and strength. I can match these in addition I have speed, science and experience on my side. How can Al hope to overcome these assets?

"I believe I can truthfully say I am a better fighter than Mello has ever met. As a featherweight I defeated Honeyboy Finnegan. How come any better than the Honeyboy.

"As a lightweight I walloped Johnny Indrisano who was later good enough to take a fall out of Joe Dundee. Then as a welterweight I trounced Jack Zivic and knocked out Meyer Cohen.

"I believe the Zivic bout showed how I shall lick Mello. Al had trouble with Zivic in both of their matches, while I handled the Pittsburgh warrior without any difficulty.

"MY life's ambition will be realized when I get Mello into a ring. I have always wanted to get a few free shots at him, but he avoided a meeting with me until now. I figure I shall outbox him easily. But I won't be satisfied with merely outboxing Al. I want to knock him out. So I am going to make a fight of it. I shall try to win by a knockout.

"I am in the best condition of my career and will not have any alibi to offer if defeated. I am going to shoot the whole works at Fenway Park, and feel confident this will be good enough to give me the victory. It will take a dozen fighters as good as Al Mello to keep me from winning the New England welterweight title."

I HAD previously seen Murphy go through his final workout. He boxed six strenuous rounds in all, two each with Tommy Lannon, Tommy Davis and Laddie Lee. He was lightning fast, and punched with terrific power. It was apparent his heart was in his work and that he is determined to grab the championship.

After his workout, Murphy weighed 148 pounds, one pound below the title weight. As Murphy never weighed as high as 147 pounds, Mello's title will be at stake once the gong sounds of the Fenway Park jam.

WHILE Murphy was winding up his training outside of Lowell, Mello was going through his last work at Orangeburg, N. Y. The champion has been working out under the direction of Bobby Goldman and Gus Wilson, Dempsey's trainer. Al knows he is fighting with his back against the wall, and he wants to come through with a decisive victory.

GOVERNOR FULLER, Lieut.-Gov. Allen, Mayor Nichols and Mayor Corbett of Lowell have been invited to attend the opening boxing show at Fenway Park.

Col. Bob McKirdy says there will be many other notables among the big crowd expected to jam the ball park.

McKirdy announces that the ring will be pitched over home plate today so that there may be a final testing of the new lighting system tonight. The same kind of lights have been installed over the ring as are used by Tex Rickard at his big promotions.

This will give the 10,000 fans in grandstand seats and the 4000 fans around the ring a perfect view of the title quarrel.

There will be thousands of additional seats in the first base pavilion if there are needed. McKirdy, though, would like to park his crowd in the grandstand and on the ground around the ring so that everybody will get a close-up of the bout.

THE preliminary card promises to be one of the finest ever offered here. Charlie Donovan, popular Dorchester welterweight, and Pete Fuoco, ringed the Indian [illegible] in a return match. Donovan [illegible] quarrel, but Fuoco was only a whisper behind.

The home town element will be present in force.

In the second semi-final Jackie Dunphie of South Boston, winner of 10 straight battles in out-of-town rings, will attempt to defeat Murray Layton of New York. This bout was the most sensational preliminary bout of the whole winter season, with Layton receiving the decision.

In the other bouts, Connie Holmes of the South End will be paired with Jimmy Connely of Brockton, a rib-tickler match. Hy Dimond of the West End with Battling Sandrelli of the South End, and Frankie O'Day of Woonsocket with Ray Cross of Melrose.

The Arena A. C. office at 333 Washington st. will remain open until 9 o'clock tonight.

Shortcake The Kiss as a Pledge -:- -:-

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Desserts Dainty

SHORTCAKE is always a favorite and when covered with berries or other fresh fruit now in season there is no dessert anjoying the same popular ity. Strawberry shortcake reigns supreme during the month of June but raspberries blackberries sweet crushed cherries peaches, apricots and even boiled rhubarb sauce must also be on hand soon. Speaking in terms of cook ing shortcake means a mixture of flour, fat and sugar, baking powder and sweet or sour cream. Sometimes shortcake is made of cake with fruit and whipped cream between. The butter cake foundation makes a very rich sweet dessert that should be served with a fruit sauce rather than whipped cream. Cake among cake contains no fat. It is a light cake and can be served with plenty of whipped cream.

Martha Lee

And so on. In any good home [illegible] should go into the making of shortcake as much as into the making of cake. Shortcake is cake and fruit and the filling, minerals and bulk in the fruit. The fruit acids and minerals have a cooling and therefore desirable effect on the blood. Here are three foundation recipes all equally delicious for berry shortcake.

[illegible] Four cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 2 tbsp. sugar, 1-3 c. evaporated milk, 1 egg yolk.

Sift dry ingredients together cut in the leaf lard and butter, then add the liquid to form a soft dough. Toss on a floured board, pat to one inch in thickness. Cut and bake for about 15 minutes in a quick 400 degree oven. Watch carefully as this cake will have been a count to stand at least one hour covered with powdered sugar in order to [illegible] Top with whipped cream.

Second: Four cups flour, 1 cup sugar, 5 tbsp. shortening, 4 tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 2 eggs, 1 cup milk, 1 tsp. vanilla.

Sift dry ingredients together cut in shortening, add beaten eggs, milk and vanilla. Turn into well greased pans and bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes. Cool and split in layers. Put fruit between layers and on top. Cover with whipped cream.

Third: Two cups flour, 2 tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 2 tbsp. sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 2 tbsp. melted butter.

Sift dry ingredients together add beaten egg, milk and melted butter. Bake in shallow pan in moderate oven about 30 minutes. Cool and split in layers. Put fruit between layers and on top. Cover with whipped cream.

LITTLE SINS" By KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard; a Battle of Hearts Between Girls

CHAPTER 43

THERE was a protracted pause. "She was sorry," Jerry said at last, "about the business. She was disappointed in me—again. But it didn't change her mind. I couldn't make her change her mind, no matter what I said. I haven't yet."

"Will? Why try?" queried Gay.

It seemed to her, when she said it, a sensible thing to say; but Jerry's eyes made her feel that it was stupid. They were almost impatient with her, those dark eyes. "Do you think," he said simply, "I could let her marry a wreck like me?"

"Jerry! You're—"

"Oh," he interrupted, and the impatience was in his voice now, "I don't mean because I'm—crippled. Not that specially. They'll give me a nice new leg, painted pink and only a little too short, and I'll be as good as new—standing still. It's not that so much as its other things. I've had a lot of time lately to think, Gay, figure things out. Just as you have. And I've got them figured out at last. She was not meant for me, and she never was. She deserves the best—morally, physically, all round—and the thing for me to do is be on my way, so that some day she can get it."

"Oh," breathed Gay. "How—how—"

She could not find the word.

"When I get out of here," Jerry said, "I'm going West, I think. To Montana. I've a friend there who's—"

He stopped. His gaze strayed past Gay, toward the door. "Hello," he smiled. "The police are back."

"Now, Mr. Davis! I've given you twice as long as I should've, and here you call me names" The nurse leaned over Gay. "This little lady has got to get back into bed."

"All right," said Gay absently. Her eyes had not left Jerry's face.

"Bed," he repeated. "That sounds like a word I know!" He smiled at Gay. His lean moist hand gripped hers again briefly. "So long, sugar," he said, just as he had always said it. "You'll come in again and say hello, won't you?"

"Of course. Of course I will"

"And—" he hesitated, "if you talk to her, you won't say anything about Montana, will you? It's better if she doesn't know, until I'm gone."

"I won't, Jerry."

They wheeled her away. She went looking back at Jerry, round the side of her chair. She wanted him to see that there were real tears on her lashes . . . But he did not see. His eyes were closed.

"This party," said Ray Curtis Elliott, "will be a bore."

"I think it's going to be fun," protested Dolly.

"You always think things are going to be fun."

"Well, they always are!"

From his great height he smiled down upon the little velvet-wrapped, fur-collared figure that lifted glossy at his side, taking three steps to his one. "Perhaps they'll call on you for a speech," he suggested.

Dolly Stopped Dead, Saying 'Ray! They Wouldn't!'

Dolly stopped dead. "Ray! They wouldn't!"

"Why not? What could be more fitting? Here's a party," went on Elliott very solemnly, "given to inaugurate the publishing of a new young magazine—a dinner party, given by the publishers, with the artists and writers who contributed to the first issue as guests of honor. And here are you the newest and youngest contributor of the bunch. Not to say the loveliest. Not to say—"

Dolly chuckled, reassured. "You scared me," she remarked. "For one fiendish minute I thought you really thought they might. And, of course I'd just die—Here, Ray, take my wrap, please."

She spilled it off backward, a fluffy white mass, into his hands. While he checked it she stood on the threshold of the hotel banquet room, gazing in. They were not late, she noted with relief—and with some surprise, for one rather expected to be late when the leisurely Elliott was one's escort.

She surveyed the scene before her eagerly. Tables arranged in a vast unbroken horseshoe, burdened with thousands of roses, miles of smilax, tons of silver. Enticing gilt-backed chairs empty as yet. In a far corner, in a palmy grotto, a band awaited its turn. From there could see the musicians' shirtfronts, gleaming white; you could hear the instruments tentatively clearing their brass and silver throats. At the end of the ballroom there was another doorway that linked it with another smaller room. People were drifting into this doorway. Laughing, gay people with goblets in their hands were drifting out again . . .

Dolly distinguished several whom she knew. There was Brooks Uling, talking to a woman in green. Over there was the little poetess, Annabelle Savage, whose earrings touched her bare golden shoulders. And the pudgy, preoccupied gentleman bustling from group to group was Mr. Oliver, father of his newborn magazine—Jackson J. Oliver, who, more than a year ago, when he edited the Manhattanite, had published Dolly Quinn's first drawings, and thus given himself the right to claim her as his Discovery.

Dolly's eyes watched Jackson Oliver, and she smiled. She was thinking of a certain tin lock box under the couch in her little studio, and of a certain document it contained. "Is it understood: That the Paramount Publishing Company, hereinafter referred to as party of the first part, agrees to pay to Dolly Quinn, hereinafter referred to as party of the second part, the sum of one hundred dollars ($100) apiece for twenty-four (24) drawings . . . A page full of typing, and at the bottom, signatures in ink still scarcely dried: "Jackson J. Oliver, Editor-in-chief (Party of the first part); Dolly Quinn (Party of the second part)" With a smear on the final n of the Quinn, because she had been so excited . . .

Upon Each the Name of a Contributor Was Stamped

"What are you smiling about?" demanded Elliott, joining her.

"Nothing special. I just feel good. Look, Ray," directed Dolly, nodding toward the horseshoe table. "What do you s'pose those are beside each place?"

"Let's find out."

"Those" proved upon closer inspection to be advance copies of the new magazine's first issue, bound in suede. They served a double purpose, both as party souvenirs, but place cards. Upon each the name of a contributor was stamped in large gilt letters.

"You can look those over later," said Elliott, tucking a hand under Dolly's elbow. "There's a lot of important drinking to be done at the moment. Come on."

They crossed an acre of carpeted floor and entered the anteroom where champagne was being served. It was noisy, smoky, crammed with people. People got in your way. Acquaintances stood over you from various Strangers bumped into you, mumbled apologies, were themselves bumped and jostled you again.

"Hey!" said Elliott, "this won't do." He led Dolly out again and sat her down in a chair beside the door. "You wait here. I'll bring you some."

She waited. A tall, sallow, young old man with a forked mustache came and kissed her hand and sat beside her. He was Charles Fernando, for whom, once upon a time, she had often gone to his spoke of this, as he invariably did when they met. "And now you have them pouring for you, eh?"

"Yes—poor things."

He regarded her with friendly black eyes. "Making a lot of money?"

"You wouldn't call it a lot," she said, "but for me it's a fortune."

"Well," advised Fernando, "don't tie yourself up with any contracts."

Dolly looked startled. "Why not?"

"Foolish if you do. You're going to be the rage, young lady, in another year. I know. I've watched your work. I've loved the title. Sign up now for—oh, say $50, $150 a drawing—whatever you make—and that's what you'll get next month from now, when you might be worth $150." He wagged his head. "Don't do it."

"Somebody," thought Dolly, "is always taking the joy out of life." But she was not really bothered. One hundred and fifty dollars for one of her drawings—impossible! She forgot that one hundred dollars would have seemed impossible, a little year ago.

"You've come up fast," Fernando was talking on. "When I think of the struggle I had—why, say, do you know that it took me seven years to gain any sort of recognition? And for more to get anywhere near where I, You're not listening."

Dolly's eyes returned to his with guilty haste. "I'm so sorry! I—there's a man over there I used to know"

"Someone rather special," hazarded Fernando, observing her quickly. "Yes?"

"No, no Just an acquaintance, Babe—" Dolly hesitated. "I haven't seen him since a year ago—" Again her eyes were drawn away from her vis-à-vis, to the main entrance across the room. "I wonder what he's doing here?" she murmured

"Striking oating chap," said Fernando, following her glance. "You mean the young giant with the tan, I take it"

"I'm hum "

"Who is he?"

"His name's Pomeroy. I don't know who he is exactly, except that he's in the advertising business."

"Pomeroy Agency, perhaps? The old man has a couple of sons."

"Perhaps," said Dolly. "I don't know" Abruptly she brought her attention back to Fernando; became quite elaborately attentive, desiring to atone for her lapse. "Anyway, Forgive me. You were telling about the seven years—"

He went on telling about them. Dolly strove to listen. Ordinarily this man's account of his climb to artistic eminence would have engrossed her; but now, although her gentian eyes remained intent and responsive on his face, she did not listen long. Her mind wandered again, Alan Pomeroy. Alan. Right over there in the doorway. Would he see him, recognize her? Was he even now coming, a dark shape . . . He went know and

Envy Is Blind

DRAWN BY Neil Brinkley

PRETTY lass with the quaint hair, the tight bodice, the fluffy frock-danesant, the round, innocent face, the rose for flirtation and small pearls for ornaments, don't you know that half your charm—oh, YOU don't think you're charming!—you owe to being a type? Flowers in their variegated colors and shapes hold half the secret of their seduction. If worlds were all alike and never changed 'twould be a rusty, dusty world. Even if those millions of women all alike were beautiful. Yes, sir! And don't you know it it's a pity along the satin cushion of its many of the things you have? YOUTH, simplicity, quaintness, the freshness of the rose you carry, and YOUTH.

Clever, worldly-wise lady with the sophisticated locks, the witty mind, the swift repartee, the showy pearls for ornament, the gorgeous fan for your flirtation, the violently-colored frock made of a shawl, you know better, don't you, than the demure pussy, and fluffed up with sorrowful envy, that you owe your charm to your colorful type? And still, knowing, surrounded by laughing blackbirds, you sigh in your heart for the fresh youth of the demure pussy's face, you wonder in her eyes, her ability to match the flower in her smooth fingers without effort! While the pussy is wanting your worldly poise! The colorful lady, with her three-to-one admirers, envies the pussy her ONE, for his sincerity and his obviously fatal Love-wounds.

The kitten in the other nook, with her devoted ONE, envies the colorful lady the profusion of her devotees and [illegible] worldliness.

And we, who like our flower beds arranged [illegible] and multi-hued and shaped, we look at one mademoiselle for [illegible] and the other for another

We don't say which we would choose to wear in our button-hole for life. But when you come to it, [illegible] are not all the same sort of choosers! So everybody's happy, [illegible] rest as the guillotine brings. I am Cleone de Montsorbier."

He repeated the name in accents of surprise.

"You are incredulous. You have heard of us in prison in Paris. We are a Nivernais family, and there should be interest in us hereabouts. You have heard perhaps that monsieur my father and madame my mother have already perished on the scaffold. You may even have heard that I was removed to a house of females, but not that I was removed thence by a Revolutionary gentleman who desired to befriend me, because [illegible] of it is not yet known even in Paris. It's a long story, monsieur le vicomte."

"Tell it to me as we walk," said he, and, taking her by the arm, he turned her about to face the distant house whose windows glowed ruddily in the deepening night.

As they went she told him briefly of her pseudo-secretaryship, and of her escape at La Charite from her republican protector whom she left unnamed. She had hoped to shelter at the Chateau de Blosson, with her cousins there. But to her dismay on reaching it in the dawn, she had found it closed and shuttered, the family gone. Thence on a weary horse, she had plodded on to Verrues, 10 miles away, where another cousin dwelt. She found Verrues a backened ruin, and in her exhaustion and despair she sat down before it and gave way to tears.

Thus she was surprised by a group of soldiers passing, a half-dozen members of a family moving out to labour in the fields. She staked all upon their being people not yet infected by Revolutionary notions, and disclosed herself to them. The [illegible] increased their fear. They were folk who still believed in God and the King; but who kept the belief secret lest it should bring evil days upon them.

Nevertheless, it was not in their simple hearts to let a gentlewoman suffer. They gave her shelter for some days, until beginning to fear the consequences to them of her being discovered there, and also because to lie in hiding was too temporary a measure to suit her impatient, eager spirit, she procured from them the peasant garments in which she stood, and departed, hoping to make her way on foot across the Nivernais and Burgundy, and thence sup over the frontier into Switzerland.

[illegible] had almost crossed, for Pouseignot was only a few miles distant from the confines of Burgundy. But the journey had been one of hardship beyond all that she had feared. And this notwithstanding that fortune and singularly befriended her. She had made a practice of resuming only by night, never venturing on the roads until they were deserted. By day she would sleep, hidden in some wood or buried in the straw of a barn or the hay of a stack. Twice she had been overpowered, but each time by charitably disposed peasants, who, without suspecting the presence in the Nivernais of the representative Chauvinners and the consequent rousing there of Revolutionary activity. Consequently she had deemed it more important to move with caution than with speed.

She was upon the road by which Cortial was coming from Pouseignot when she became aware of his advance. Because it was not yet quite dark, out of an excessive caution she had slipped over the wall to avoid him, and thus had not only been discovered, but had been discovered in circumstances which had aroused his suspicions. It was the one mistake of judgment in her travels.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

SOME people make love
A GOD. Who shall judge
Its POWER, for
Who but those FAVORED can Know its bliss? Who but
Those who have BETRAYED him
Can estimate his SCORN?
And who but those who have Made SACRIFICES can know
The PEACE he brings!

LOVE is a white god whose
Fire PURGES.
DESIRE is a DEVIL. Red hot.
WHO but those who have
SUCCUMBED to him can ever
Estimate his POWER? Who but
Those who have FALLEN can
Know the DISILLUSION
That he brings? Who but those Who have been TEMPTED can discover
That the whole business is a
TRICK? Desire promises
LOVE to the weary,
Surcease to the JADED, comfort to the LONELY. For
DESIRE is a devil. He poses
As GOOD. Men, of course, who
Love DESIRE for his own sake
Worship a FALSE god.
But those who will PAY
The price of LOVE need never Take its COUNTERFEIT.

Have Beautiful Skin and Youthful Expression

To have and keep an exquisite complexion, a delicate coloring or tint to the cheeks, begin at once to use pure mercolized wax. Obtainable at any drug store, it is applied to the face, neck and arms, nightly like a cold cream. Day by day, it peels off the outer layer of aged, soiled or blemished skin in tiny particles, until the entire mask of imperfect skin is removed. The under skin then appears clear, smooth and lovely, with the unmistakable coloring of youth. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To remove wrinkles and restore facial contour, use as an astringent, 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 pint pint witch hazel.

By Miss Abercrombie

I HAVE told how the stranger—a man of apparent refinement—had tickled me with the small feather duster, in carnival spirit.

I was what the world calls a "society girl." That is, I enjoyed the society of men.

My mother, being a bridge player, had never warned me, so when the stranger asked for my address and telephone number I thoughtlessly gave it to him.

Of course, I never suspected he was a married man, as he merely explained that he was a traveling salesman who happened to be passing through our little town.

Nor did I dream that he was at that very moment planning to take me to a picture show and then—

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

Madame, you can't wear a smaller shoe than that!

HELPING SCHOOL CHILD

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

ELIZABETH ANN and Tommy were being wheeled through the park by their fond mothers one balmy spring day. Elizabeth Ann's blanket had become disarranged through the efforts of her strong, active little feet and her mother stopped to tuck her in again.

"Wisheff det told hf her don't teep tuvved up," she crooned, busily caring for her small daughter.

The other mother was silent, looking on in keen disapproval.

"Why do you mumble that senseless jargon to her?" she finally inquired when she could stand it no longer. "Why don't you talk English to her?"

The tiny girl's mother looked up at her friend in a dazed wonder. "Oh, she's only a baby once, and I adore her so."

"I adore Tommy, too; in fact I think I really love him more than you do your baby."

Elizabeth's mother rose to her full height in frozen wrath. "How can you say such a thing?"

"Oh, don't get excited. What I mean is, that I'm thinking a bit past the stage where Tommy is a baby—I'm thinking about making life as easy as possible for him when he goes out into the world. I'm teaching him English, the language he will have to understand, and through which he will have to make others understand him. You are teaching Elizabeth Ann a language which she will have to unlearn the moment she associates with other people, or enters school. After all, it's hard enough for the little people to learn ONE language. Why make them learn two?"

"I suppose that is true, but I love her so. I guess it's just the 'love-talk' of mothers."

"Yes," agreed Tommy's mother, "but don't you realize that your daughter is too small to understand a single word you say, as a word. She loves to hear your adoring tone, and see your loving eyes beaming down at her. She gets the big idea that she is quite the sweetest thing on earth to you, not from what you say, but from the tone in which you say it. She'd get the idea just the same if you recited the alphabet to her, thinking all the while how sweet and precious she is, or if you told her all that in Chinese. Why not try telling her in English—in the words she will need to carry on through life?"

"I never thought of it quite in that way," slowly replied the small girl's mother.

Lots of us have never thought of what we are doing when we mumble utterly foolish words to a baby. But stop and think of all he has to learn in this world. He has to learn the names of objects he sees, then he has to try and try again before he can pronounce those names correctly. The least we can do is to give him words which he can carry into life wit hhim, and give them as correctly as we can.

And the words he learns first will always come easiest to him later, because they've been with him longest. For instance, when I was a very small girl, I said "dist" for "just." My father begged that I be allowed to keep this one baby word, and my mother, much against her will, refrained from correcting me in this instance. In a case of this nature, where one particular word seems to be personal with a child and you hate to tear it from him, it does no great harm, but remember that if you are going to leave a baby word in your child's vocabulary, leave one which he will not be ashamed to use when he is grown up, because to this very day, if a friend is calling me from the foot of the stairs, and I am frantically trying to locate my gloves, excited by the thought that we are late in getting started, I invariably say: "Wait DIST a minute." That word comes out without any conscious effort. It is ingrained in my mind, and to say the word "just" always takes a conscious effort on my part.

You will help your child in his first days at school in a big way, if you will give him a working knowledge of correct English. Words are his key to unlock his book of knowledge, and he cannot take in new thoughts either from the printed pages or from the lips of his teacher unless he knows what they mean, and knows how they sound when they are correctly pronounced.

AS the world rates success, you have reached the top.

Now you think you can afford to take things easy.

Your greatest desire now is to make an impression socially.

You are able to entertain in a manner which should open the way for your entrance into a better class of society than that in which you have mingled in the past.

You have frowned on the person who, even in a moderate way, followed the course you are about to pursue.

In your money-making game you have not had time to cultivate those whose friendship might have improved your manners.

You think a financial standing is sufficient to assure a social position of prominence.

You are not going to be regulated by the social code of dinner bridge parties.

Real people care more about having agreeable guests, who know how to conduct themselves when they go entertain, than they do for the bank roll unfamiliar with the etiquette which should guide guests and make them desirable.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

WELL—it's long skirts and long hair again! And face veils and femininity! Back to the buckram and whalebones, ladies! Back to the harem and hairpins!

The great mystery of the sexes is not that men ruled the world for so long, but how women ever stopped changing their minds long enough to get the ballot or anything else.

* * *

Women are the champion wasters and energy dissipators of the world! They yelp for "freedom" in one breath—and clamor to know the latest "dictates" from Paris in the next. They protest with their voices—and rush to obey with their pocketbooks!

They are perfect gluttons for slavery!

Not that the vanishing knees and shaved necks won't be a relief to the eyes. It WILL! It will be the greatest impetus to romance that fashion could possibly devise. When legs become a "treat" to bus conductors, perhaps other men won't yawn at sight of them.

* * *

But a MAN wouldn't waste 40 seconds of honest thought on a thing like the length of his coat or his trousers. If he liked long sleeves or long hair or long beards or long trousers, he'd accept them. If he didn't, no power on earth would thrust them upon him.

* * *

It has been more than 35 years since there has been half an inch change in the length of men's coats or the height of their collars. Twenty years ago men stopped parting their hair in the middle and began parting it on the side. And that's where all fashion-era still parting it.

* * *

In that time, women have changed from bangs and buns to pompadours and puffs; from pompadours to "fish-hooks" and marcel waves; from fish-hooks to boyish-bobs—and now they are going back to long hair and buns again.

* * *

Men's tailors wouldn't have the nerve and audacity to suggest a more radical change than an extra button on men's coats every five or six years. And even when a man agrees to that, he feels that he is making a terrible concession to the fashions.

* * *

A woman lets the little details of life, and above all the ever-changing styles, absorb her soul, fill her mind and eat up her days, years, youth and strength. And then she wonders why men manage to do more work, and yet have more freedom, more comfort, more fun and more time for PLAY than she does!

BIG N. H. FOREST TRACT SOLD BY BOSTON FIRM

Parker-Young Company of Boston has consummated sale to the Government of its so-called Waterville, N. H., tract of some 23,000 acres for $1,100,000. It has received nearly $1,000,000 in cash after deducting value of stumpage cut therefrom during the past year.

The company had no desire to dispose of these holdings, but yielded to popular demand that certain portions of this woodland be preserved forever in its primeval state. Outside of certain scenic areas, it will be policy of the Government to sell stumpage under careful supervision.

It is anticipated that Parker-Young Company will purchase more or less of the stumpage over the 15-year period during which it reserves driving rights, dams and mills at Campton where pulpwood is held and loaded on cars.

Minus the Waterville tract, Parker-Young still has over 10,000 acres in the immediate vicinity of its pulp and paper mills at Lincoln, N. H., while its subsidiaries own 150,000 acres of land in Maine, Vermont, Washington and Florida.

In logging pulpwood the company also removes hardwood from which is made high grade lumber, and in addition supplies United Shoe Machinery Corporation with thousands of cords of hardwood bolts for the latter's new heel stock mill at Campton. The completion of saw-mill and turning mill owned by Parker-Young and the heel stock mill and dry kilns of the shoe machinery company make a unit for practically complet utilization of forest products, unlike anything in New England.

On the east branch of the Pemigewasset river of Lincoln and above Parker-Young Co. owns more than 30,000 horsepower of water powers, only 2000 horsepower of which is developed. And it already owns all riparian rights and land necessary to complete the development. The river has a fall of over 1200 feet within 15 miles above Lincoln. The company also owns a pulp mill and water power at Livermore Falls, N. H., about two miles above Plymouth, where there has been some talk of raising the dam to 700 feet thus creating a very large development. Water rights are also owned by the company at Beebe river, Ellsbee Pond and Woodstock, N. B.

Parker-Young Co. directors will meet Friday and declare the usual quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the $2,500,000 of preferred stock publicly held.

U. S. STEEL IN FIRST "COMBINE" WITH OTHERS

United States Steel Products Co., subsidiary of United States Steel Corp., and Bethlehem Steel Export Corp. have combined under the export Trade Act into the Steel Export Association of America for exporting iron and steel products. Export Trade Act grants exemption from United States laws to an association entered into for sole purpose of engaging in export trade, with proviso that there be no restraint of trade within United States or restraint of export trade of any domestic competitor. This is first instance on record where United States Steel Corp. has combined with other steel makers, either in trade associations or corporate business enterprises.

HOOVER GOOD BUSINESS MAN, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES

New York, June 20—Herbert Hoover comes nearer being a strictly business man than any of the three warm friends of American Presidents.

It will be good news to workers to learn that he believes "We can not only maintain American standards of living—we can raise them."

B. C. Forbes,
Noted financial writer

Why were so many financial and business leaders luke-warm towards Hoover as a possible presidential candidate?

The glib explanation has been made that they feared he would not be electable enough, that he would not do their bidding. But he would follow his own course. Contrary to the supporting a President of the United States is hardly regarded as feasible these days even by the most dominating and dictatorial of financial or business magnates.

So far as I have been able to find out, neither finance nor business was bitterly opposed to Hoover. It would be more correct to say that they simply did not warm up to him.

The truth is that men of affairs have a tremendous respect for Hoover's ability, character, industry and record. But he has failed to capture their hearts, their affections. His personality is not magnetic. Educated and trained as an engineer, he has the typical engineer's matter-of-factness. He is solid, but not colorful. He is earnest, not effusive. He is very serious-minded and rarely unbends.

* * *

That Hoover will be supported by practically all influential Republicans can be accepted as certain. Should Governor Smith be nominated, he will receive at least a few, if not quite a number, of votes from New York financial and business men who ordinarily vote Republican, but who know "Al" and like him tremendously. Smith's personality is totally different from Hoover's. He knows how to be a good fellow. He radiates cheerfulness. As a campaigner he is capable of regaling and captivating audiences with sallies of wit.

Should Hoover be elected, he would bring to the White House an understanding of business not possessed by any predecessor. For the last seven years he has been in a better position than any other individual in America to analyze the functioning of industry, commerce and finance.

His administration of the Department of Commerce has been invaluable valuable to American business and to American workers. He has been the arch-enemy of waste and the arch-protagonist of efficiency. He has done more than any other person to fit the United States to compete successfully in world markets. His name was made for the tape-measure than for red-tape.

In his annual report issued at the end of 1924 Hoover made these statements:

"We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our industry and commerce of any nation in the world. Yet wastes and duplication. There are wastes which arise from widespread unemployment during depressions, and from speculation and overproduction in booms; wastes attributable to labor turnover and wastes of labor conflicts; wastes due to intermittent and seasonal production, in the coal and construction industries; vast wastes from, strictures in competition, from inadequate transportation, such as the lack of sufficient terminals; wastes caused by excessive styles and multiple varieties in materials, arising from lack of efficient processes; wastes by fire, and wastes in human life.

Since then he has waged unrelenting warfare against things calculated to impair our business efficiency. He has made efficient by bringing about standardization, much unnecessary and costly waste has been abolished. For example, varieties of paving brick were reduced from 88 to 9; sizes ranges from 120 to 4; sizes of bed blankets from 78 to 12, and files and rasps from 1,351 to 494 varieties.

FOOD EXHIBIT IS ATTRACTING HUNDREDS

A food preservation exhibit designed as a guide to good health continues today and will be open for the remainder of the week in the ninth floor annex assembly hall of the Jordan Marsh Company.

Microscopes, projection machines, colored charts, a variety of foodstuffs and forty-five guides and demonstrators are on hand at the show which was obtained for Boston by the Jordan Marsh Company through the co-operation of the Frigidaire Corporation of Dayton, Ohio.

The evolution of food preservation from ancient times is depicted in the display. There are illustrations of the parts played by famous men of the ages—Xerxes, Napoleon, Lord Bacon among them—in the development of food preservation and good health. The modern application of simple health rules is illustrated in a practical manner.

The week's exhibit is expected to mark a long step in the education of the public in general and housewives in particular to the fundamentals upon which good health is based.

In connection with the display, Edward R. Mitton, a director of the Jordan Marsh Co., said: "When we stop to consider that a very large part of human ailments are preventable directly to the food we eat, it is easy to see that utmost care should be used to make certain that only good food properly preserved and well prepared, is eaten."

FAREWELL FOR FR. DIVINEY

Abraham at the 42nd annual convention held in this city. The position carries with it the leadership of the order in Massachusetts, which boasts more than 20,000 members, while the number enrolled throughout the country is close to 250,000 members. He also will have a seat on the National Executive Board.

Kalesky is well known as a practicing attorney in Boston for nearly 30 years, and has been identified with Jewish interests during all his life. He has also been national vice-president of the American Jewish Congress and is vice-president of the Boston Congress Committee.

DOUGLAS SHOE STORE MANAGERS IN SESSION

The semi-annual meeting of the district managers of the W. L. Douglas retail shoe stores is being held out the United States is taking place this week at Brockton, to lay plans for the fall season, including the selection of styles and general policy for the stores.

A dinner was tendered by the company to the visiting managers and board of directors at the Hotel Cabin Cohasset, where speeches were made by Pres. H. L. Tinkham and directors.

Tinkham, in calling the meeting to order, congratulated the managers on the increase of sales in the W. L. Douglas shoe stores for the spring season just ending, and stated it was one of the most successful seasons in the history of the business.

DEFECTIVE STEERING GEAR FATAL TO WRITER

Cork, Irish Free State, June 20 (AP)—Peadar Dunn Byrne, American-Irish writer, was attributed today to the defective steering gear of his new automobile. As described by his secretary he was drowned after four successful accidents to the car. A verdict of accidental death was returned at an inquest. He lost his life near his Irish residence, Conain Castle at Brandon.

Miss Burkett, his secretary, who started on the fatal ride with the novelist, said she noticed the steering gear was out of order and asked Byrne to return. He said it was all right and refused, and kept repeating even after the first three accidents.

1929 RITCHIE'S YEAR, ASSERTS ASTROLOGER

Today Catherine Victoria Thompson reads the ninth horoscope of a presidential possibility. Has predicted the nomination of Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate.

By CATHERINE V. THOMPSON

Albert Cabell Ritchie, Governor of Maryland, was born Tuesday, Aug. 29, 1876, at Richmond, Va.

This gentleman is very strong in Earth signs, viz: Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn. He has five planets out of nine in them, and is born for a run of luck from time to time.

One of these good times is on now, and will last up to June, 1929.

He has Mars in conjunction with which greatly strengthens his constitution, and he should live to a fine old age.

These planets are in Virgo and the fact is there also as Mercury rules the intellect and is exalted in Virgo. His should be orderly and methodical, and his mind is fine and discriminating.

He loves music, has much artistic ability, is somewhat notional in his likes and dislikes, and order and harmony are necessary to his health.

Governor Ritchie possesses great endurance and can surmount any difficulty. He will always rebound from defeat or disaster.

He has good perspective faculties, excellent judgment and is devoted to his friends. Also he has a keen sense of touch and considerable intellectual discrimination.

It would be difficult for the Governor to receive any honors at this time because Saturn is retrograding to an evil aspect, and his progressed, Mercury and Venus, cannot make any strong aspects before January, 1929.

The Governor's 56th year is very strong for promotion and increase of estate, but he is not planning to occupy the presidential chair.

MOVIETONE NEWSREEL SOON FOR PUBLIC

New York, June 20—The M-G-M Movietone newsreel will be ready for presentation, it was announced today by Nicholas Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

The public may look for the finest of sound subjects, recorded with expert perfection," said Mr. Schenck in a statement. "The new step forward in the newsreel, provided for his company by the William Randolph Hearst organization, the largest individually controlled news agency in the world.

"This M-G-M Movietone will also be incorporated in many of the feature pictures produced at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, including the Hal Roach comedies and other short features."

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

G. O. P. Platform Faults

Among Other Things, the Document Is Weak in Its Section Regarding Public Utilities

The Republican platform is probably as good as could be expected from that very conservative party.

It has three outstanding faults:

One, it is weak in its section regarding public utilities. It declares that "Republican Congresses have steadily strengthened the Interstate Commerce Commission." Then it proceeds to the solemn statement that public utilities should be regulated by the States.

Why did the Republican party have to "steadily strengthen the Interstate Commerce Commission"? It was because the people found that the State railroad commissions had become the mere puppets of the railroad corporations.

The people demanded an effective control by a Federal Commission at Washington where the full glare of publicity would beat down upon the appointment and the acts of the commissioners.

Now the Republican party refuses to heed the lesson of experience and rejects federal regulation of the electric light and power companies, consolidated—like the railroads—into huge monopolistic combinations that extend beyond State lines. The public utility companies have secured over the State commissions supposed to regulate them a control that exceeds anything known in the palmiest public-be-damned days of the railroads.

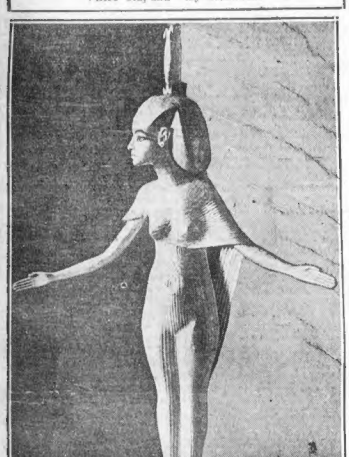
Two, the platform quotes George Washington and Abraham Lincoln regarding honest enforcement of the Constitution. But it pays no attention to the failure of successive Republican Congresses to observe the Constitution themselves. For eight years Congress has refused to obey the constitutional mandate to reapportion seats in the House of Representatives according to the 1920 census.

Three, the platform is barren of reproach to the House of Representatives for failing to join the Senate in amending the Constitution so as to permit a new Congress to assemble on the January after election instead of THIRTEEN MONTHS AFTER ELECTION as at present. By silence the Republican convention has endorsed short sessions, lame ducks, filibusters and their facilitation of control of Congress, political bosses and corporate corruptionists.

The Democratic party will probably have a better platform but worse candidates.

Miss Neith--Goddess

VERY Old, and Very MODERN



SHE GUARDED THE PHARAOH'S VISCERA

This beautiful photograph of an ancient Egyptian goddess, photographed by Mr. Harry Burton, of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, reproduced from the Illustrated London News, is an interesting and beautiful relic of art in a civilization dating back 3000 years.

You have read about Egypt's Pharaoh Tutankhamen, whose interesting tomb was discovered by an American explorer. That explorer, Mr. Carter, by the way, told a gathering of guests at the house of Judge E. H. Gary that the beginning of his work in Egypt was done for the late Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, by whom he was sent to Egypt to make collections for the University of California.

Included among the contents of the strange Tutankhamen tomb was a "Canopic Shrine" containing jars in which had been placed the heart, intestines and other interior arrangements of the great Pharaoh. They were preserved apart from the outside body, which was embalmed, made into a mummy, now in the museum in Egypt.

It seems a queer idea to separate a man's heart and intestines from his body, especially if you put in his tomb a small ship, a model of one that is to take him across the great River of Life, to some kind of heaven later on. You would think a man would prefer to keep his body, heart and in-

HAVING FRIENDS IS BEST DEFENSE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

INSENSATE and irrational. These words were used, not by some soap box orator, not by some standing minority report, not by some fanatical pacifist or Russian bolshevist, but they were the utterance of Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, one of the old sea dogs of the United States navy.

The words sound rather extreme and on the whole they are zippy words. The whole sentence he used was that he condemned the "insensate and irrational competition in armaments among nations."

"I believe that further limitation of armaments," he continued, "is one of the most practical 'next steps' that may be taken in seeking a formula whereby war may be avoided."

"Limitation is a deterrent in that there can be no sudden fatal attack by one nation upon another."

At the outbreak of the late war when there was widespread enlisting in the United States army, scientific gentlemen asserted that "the majority of people in this country are morons." That is, that they had the intelligence of children of 12.

What is intelligence? Perhaps it can best be defined as the ability to learn from our mistakes. A fool steps in the same hole twice and keeps bumping his nose right along on the same post. Even a cat or a dog when they try one thing and get hurt by it learn not to try that thing again.

This is about the only way the world keeps from burning up on hot stoves. People know by experience that a hot stove is not a nice thing to handle and they give it a wide berth.

Fools and morons keep putting their hands on hot stoves and consequently those hands are always scorched.

Now this matter of national defense has been a subject of interest to nations as long as there has been any history.

When will the people of the world become adult-minded enough to perceive that the only defense that amounts to anything is to have friends, to have friendly relations with other people and be able to call on them to help in time of need? To be able to call on friends in time of trouble is better than all the cannon in the world.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'M beginning to think that we need more intelligent selfishness and less sloppy self-denial in our domestic arrangements.

There's Emily Jones—she's a Horrible Example of unrestrained indulgence in Self-Sacrifice. Emily is 35, married, with a large family of youngsters, in-laws and blood kin, and she's the prize Burden Bearer of the tribe.

The ordinary sacrifices which we must all meet aren't enough for Emily. She actually goes out and looks for crosses to carry. And you know how it is with families—they certainly aim to oblige—one and all they dump their burdens on Emily's neck.

Now, since this is what she asked for you might think that Emily would be pleased, but far from it. Every time she thinks of all the loads she's carrying and how she's imposed upon and how no one appreciates her her heart bleeds afresh. So, as a consequence, she nullifies all her good deeds by the way she wheezes about 'em afterward.

In spite of her noble soul, Emily's just about as popular as the epidemic of pink eye. People run when they see her coming, even those whose crosses she is bearing, for they're bored to death with the details of her martyrdom.

I used to be an Emily myself once. Always grabbing some one's burden and lashing it to my neck. And then beefing about it afterwards. I had kidded myself into thinking that I was God's Noblest Child—but, as a matter of fact, I wasn't being noble at all—I was just showing off. I had kidded myself into thinking I was chuck full of brotherly love, but in reality I was simply full of vanity and a desire to boss. I wanted to show people how much better I could manage their affairs than they could, and prove what a strong, wise, generous, loving guy I was. And, of course, people are bound to get wise to hokum like that. I got exactly what I deserved when they imposed on me and were utterly ungrateful.

So now I'm strong for intelligent selfishness.

Don't bite off more than you can chew. Don't take on the other fellow's burden until you've succeeded in carrying your own. Generally speaking, you'll render your greatest service to the world if you'll just mind your own business and tote your own cross patiently and efficiently. If you're faced with another's burden, think well before you take it on. Can you carry it calmly, sensibly, with a friendly heart? Or will you make the whole community suffer because you're doing a friendly deed? If so, don't try to be a martyr. A peevish martyr is the worst possible pest. DON'T CARRY A CROSS UNLESS YOU HAVE TO. DON'T CARRY IT AT ALL UNLESS YOU CAN DO IT WITH A SMILING HEART.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THERE is a man whom I would trust
With utmost faith and always,
I count his judgments wholly just,
His reasons are upright ways.
The reason, dare I name it so,
For which I thus repose,
My trust, in truth, I only know
How well he loves a rose!

This is unreason, some will say,
Who knows? They may be right,
Yet when I saw him pause today
To watch the swallow's flight,
I felt his being still must keep
God's spirit undefiled.
My loyalty to him is deep,
He loves birds, bloom and child!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 20—This story comes from an authentic source. It concerns the gathering of eight married and rather pleasure surfeited couples to play bridge in an aristocratic street. Many drinks had been served and after the final rubber an old game was suggested.

The game was Truth—a simple pastime of boopshirt days wherein every participant is pledged to answer truthfully any question asked. It was not expected the game would take such a serious and ghastly turn but from all accounts it did.

All were slightly blotto when the questioning began, and stimulated by a false bravado it was apparent that despite the consequences the stark, ugly truth was being revealed. The first gentleman questioned admitted he had cheated at cards and had not been lax that very evening. He was the big winner.

This was somewhat stunning, but worse was to come. A wife exacted from her husband the information he had gone on two week-end trips with a lady present, but did not mention her name. Another wife admitted she had never loved her husband and was now in love with another man.

Still another confessed she had written a series of poison pen letters to the lady who was now her hostess. The affair had been placed in the hands of a private detective agency for solution. A man also revealed he was maintaining an apartment under another name.

All revelations were of this sensational sort and one was so degraded it can not be printed. The party broke up in white-faced terror, and most of the guests went home separately. An innocent diversion had become a grim and awful reality.

As a result two of the ladies have flitted to Paris for week-end divorces. A scandalous alienation of affection suit is in the hands of lawyers. One gentleman was called before his board of directors and given a curt dismissal. Drink and Truth had proved a deadly mixture.

CHEATING at cards has proved a delectable theme for fictionists. I was once in at the death of a card cheating denouement in real life. A man who had for some time been suspected of sharp practices in a friendly poker game was trapped and exposed. All but the culprit came to the game knowing of the expected development, and there seemed to be that feeling among us that an animal lover might have in torturing a rabbit. Afterward most of us went home giddy with a sort of nausea. It ended poker playing for some of the participants for all time.

THERE is little use to dodge the fact that the handkerchief-in-the-cuff idea for men is spreading. As a pioneer booter in the wrist watch craze and finally a victim, there is little to be said out loud One has to take it back eventually anyway. But at this particular moment it looks gosh-awful.

NOEL COWARD, the London play wright, is the reputed originator of tucking the handkerchief into the cuff. He found it a solution to a search for a handkerchief during the horrid days of theatrical rehearsals. It is, of course, a revival of a custom flourishing in days when knights were bold and rapiers crossed at sunup. Even so I prefer to remain a hip pocket handkerchief boy.

SPATS, monocles, wrist watches and handkerchiefs in the cuff can be worn in New York. Nobody gives a hang. But west of the Mississippi the tolerance is not so pronounced. One of the English theatrical stars says he substitutes nose glasses for the monocle at St. Louis when traveling westward.

WHEN a water hair wave for gentlemen becomes fashionable—and it is just around the corner—New York loses one of its open-faced adopted sons. My last promise to the old folk was to keep away from the beauty parlor hell holes.

Miss Neith—Goddess

testines together for a future life, if he really BELIEVED in it.

But those that manufacture religion to suit themselves do not allow logic to stand in their way.

One idea was to make the Pharaoh's body as nearly immortal as possible. Embalming is a difficult process. And to make the embalming fluid go in far enough to preserve the heart, intestines, etc., was difficult.

Therefore, the insides were taken out and put in one place, the body in a gold coffin nearby.

The Canopic Shrine containing viscera of the dead Egyptian monarch was protected by four beautiful Egyptian goddesses on the four sides of the shrine. And this is one of the goddesses.

She was modeled, of course, not from an actual goddess descended from heaven, but from some well-bred Egyptian girl of the period.

You notice with interest her delicate thin arms, the very long fingers and well developed thumb, indicating centuries of civilization, such as it was.

You notice also that that Egyptian girl's feet were not SQUEEZED. Observe the separation between the big toe and the next toe. The lady wore sandals perhaps with a thong running up between the two toes, keeping them apart.

The figure is refined, the face intelligent.

Just what this goddess Neith was supposed to do for the Pharaoh, we don't know.

But it is interesting to see what a high-bred Egyptian girl of 3000 years ago looked like.

One thing is certain, this ancient type of Egyptian lady was far more beautiful and refined than the famous and comparatively modern Cleopatra of the Ptolemies, descendant of a general that fought under Alexander the Great, and made himself ruler of Egypt.

Cleopatra's beauty was much exaggerated. According to the Italian historian, Ferrero, it was her gold Marc Antony wanted, that he might use it to fight his rival, Caesar.

Caesar had a better way of getting ahead than relying on any woman's money, and when he finished there wasn't any Cleopatra, or Marc Antony, either.

To the average human being this little statue of a girl of ancient Egypt looks simply "queer." But to the artist it is intensely interesting. And to the anthropologist, studying development of the human body, this little creature is intensely important, artistically and scientifically.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The muse does not allow the praise-deserving hero to die; she enthrones him in the heavens.
—Horace.

There ought to be a system of manners in every nation which a well-formed mind would be disposed to relish. To make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely.
—Burke.

He lives who dies to win a lasting name.
—Drummond.

Day is pushed out by day, and each new moon hastens to its end.
